

WILL NOT TRANSFER
PLACE OF HEARING

SENATE COMMITTEE INVESTIGATING CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS CONTINUES TO MEET IN WASHINGTON.

PLAN A DEEPER PROBE

Senator Luke Lea Arrives From West to Aid in Work—Archbold, Indignant, Sails for Europe—Colonel Silent.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Aug. 24.—Plans to transfer the hearing of the senate special committee on campaign contributions from Washington to New York have been abandoned. The committee so far has been charged only with investigating campaign contributions and expenditures in 1904 and 1908, but it will look particularly into the Penrose-Archbold-Roosevelt controversy over the Standard Oil contributions to the 1904 campaign. The date of further hearing will be determined later.

Spurred on by the testimony of John D. Archbold alleging that the Standard Oil company contributed $100,000 to the republican national committee in 1904, with the knowledge and consent of Col. Roosevelt, the senate committee investigating campaign funds met early today to lay plans for pursuing its investigation.

Senator Luke Lea, democratic member of the committee, hurrying back from the west, arrived early today and went into executive session with his colleagues to frame a course of action. It was expected the committee would decide upon the dates of hearings, the places at which they should be held, and what witnesses may be called.

Senator Poindexter proposed that the subjects to be investigated be extended to include "all correspondence between John D. Archbold and members of the senate and of the house of representatives since 1900." This amendment was adopted. Senator Penrose proposed that the name of Geo. W. Perkins be included with that of Archbold and that the term "ex-presidents of the United States" be included with members of congress. "It is suggested, however," he remarked, "that there is only one living ex-president, and as we are not interested in dead ex-presidents, I wish to substitute 'Mr. Theodore Roosevelt—or Colonel, I believe, his title is.' This amendment also was incorporated.

Archbold Indignant.
New York, Aug. 24.—"I am not a liar. I am not accustomed to being so accused and will not endure it lightly."

John D. Archbold of the Standard Oil company made this brief statement before sailing for Europe today in reply to Col. Roosevelt's charges that he told untruths while on the stand at Washington.

"What do you mean when you say you will not endure it lightly?" Mr. Archbold was asked.

Mr. Archbold waved his hand deprecatingly, then walked down the pier, boarded the White Star liner Majestic. He will remain in Europe for several weeks.

Roosevelt Silent.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 24.—Col. Roosevelt had nothing to add to his statement of last night in which he said he did not believe John D. Archbold's testimony before the investigating committee was true and in which he charged Mr. Archbold with a "wicked assault on a dead man," in connection with Mr. Archbold's testimony concerning an alleged conversation with the late Cornelius N. Bliss, nor would Col. Roosevelt discuss the possibility of his testifying before the senate committee.

TRAP FOR HUSBAND
CAUSES HIS ARREST

Answers Matrimonial Advertisement Written by Own Wife and Is Lodged in Police Station.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Aug. 24.—Deserted by her husband whom she met through a matrimonial paper, Mrs. G. H. Moore, advertised in the same publication, this time under an assumed name and received an answer from her unsuspecting spouse who expressed an earnest desire to marry the beautiful Mrs. Henrietta Butler with an income of $10,000. Finally Mrs. Butler informed Moore that if he would come to Englewood, her home, she would talk it over. Moore took a train last night from Detroit. Mrs. Moore wearing a heavy veil was awaiting him at the station today. With her were three detectives. "I love you," exclaimed Moore as he jumped from the train and saw "Mrs. Butler." "That's funny," the woman said and then she removed her veil. Before Moore finished gasping he was on his way to a police station. Mrs. Moore accused him of having taken $4,000 from her when he recently deserted her.

Gamblers and Resort Keepers in New York Leave City Hurriedly When Subpoena Servers Appear.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Aug. 24.—Scores of gamblers and keepers of disorderly houses have suddenly found themselves suffering from ill health and subpoena servers attached to the district attorney's office said today that it was surprising how many persons of the underworld had found it necessary to leave the city at this time. Ten process servers invaded Broadway in three automobiles to serve subpoenas to appear in the John Doe proceedings to inquire into police graft. Only four of the men for whom subpoenas were issued were found. Scores of others for whom subpoenas were issued it was feared had left the city.

GOVERNOR TO DEFEND REFERENDUM MEASURE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Denver, Colo., Aug. 24.—When the decision of District Judge Harry C. Riddle, holding that the initiative and referendum bill which the people adopted two years ago with 60,000 majority is not valid is carried to the supreme court by Attorney General Benjamin Griffith, Governor J. P. Shafer will file a brief and appear in person to defend the bill. The governor announced his determination to enter the case personally shortly after he was informed of the decision of Judge Riddle.

CONSECRATE BISHOP AT MONTREAL TODAY

Mgr. Georges Gauthier Made Bishop of Philopopolis and Auxiliary Bishop of Montreal.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Montreal, Aug. 24.—In St. James Cathedral this morning his Excellency Mgr. Stagni, the papal delegate, consecrated Mgr. Georges Gauthier, rector of the cathedral, as bishop of Philopopolis and auxiliary bishop of Montreal in succession to Mgr. Racicot, who resigned on account of ill health. The consecration ceremony took place in the presence of a large congregation of Catholic priests, prelates and laity of Montreal and vicinity.

The new bishop is regarded as one of the most able and eloquent of the French-Canadian clergy. He was born in Montreal in 1871 and was ordained by the late Archbishop Fabre in 1894. He spent the next two years studying in Rome and on his return to Montreal he taught for two years in the Montreal Seminary. His eloquence soon attracted attention and the Archbishop added him to the staff of the cathedral in 1908. When in 1904 Archbishop Bruchesi created the parish of St. James the Major, with the cathedral as the parochial church, Rev. Canon Gauthier was made the rector.

Senator Dixon Issues Statement That Campaign Has Been Started in Mississippi Valley.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Aug. 24.—United States Senator Joseph M. Dixon, director of the national progressive campaign, and Medill McCormick, member of the campaign executive committee of the new party, today issued a statement in which they said that organization of the progressive party practically had been completed in all the Mississippi valley states.

Reports from Missouri are similar to those from Iowa. In Wisconsin a state convention will be held Sept. 11 and provisional committees have been selected in a number of congressional districts.

Senator Dixon today discussed the proposed Wilson national progressive republican league. "That league," said Senator Dixon, "is simply a by-partisan machine organized to save the republican party from destruction."

EXPRESS COMPANIES

Adams and American Express Companies Must Face Trial for Alleged Violation of Law.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Aug. 24.—The Adams and American express companies indicted for violations of the interstate commerce act must face trial. There is no escape through pleading that they are not corporations or companies within the meaning of the law. That in effect was the decision of Federal Judge Hazel of Buffalo in an opinion today in the case begun by the interstate commerce commission against the two companies. The commission was notified of Judge Hazel's decision.

VICTORY FOR PARTY
DEMOCRATIC HOUSE

Speaker Clark in Valedictory Reviews Constructive Legislation of His Party in 61st and 62nd Congress.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, August 24.—Speaker Champ Clark today delivering the valedictory of the Democratic House of the Sixty Second Congress, asserted that historians would declare with absolute truth that the House Democrats of the 61st and 62nd Congresses "did great things" and "have made a sweeping victory approximately certain, a victory that will give us the House, the Senate and the President."

Dramatically addressing his colleagues while the clock across the speaker's chamber was slowly moving toward the final adjournment time, the Speaker in a tribute to leaders of both parties, declared that no majority was ever more successfully led than by Representative Underwood nor any minority ever led more ably than by Representative Mann.

"Leader Mann," said he, "has contested with Leader Underwood every step of the long and wearisome road we have traveled with the stubborn courage of the English squares at Waterloo. I have not always agreed with Brother Mann—God forbid—but he lives up fully to his name. He is in every truth a man. Were it not for him I would feel decidedly lonesome in the Speaker's chair."

Fought a Good Fight.
As Speaker,—"dean of the faculty so to speak" Mr. Clark said, he felt very proud of the membership of the House and he declared his belief that democrats should sit in the seats of the mighty, hold every column of vantage and every place of power.

Speaker Clark said that for years the democrats had been sneered at as a party of negation, green hands in public life, and a party of public business, ridiculed as a party of public business, and even the democrats themselves had been ridiculed as a party of public business.

Mr. Clark said as long as the earth spins upon its axis or slides down the ecliptic, public men who would take to heart the simple and instructive story of the astounding change in the political situation "since that melancholy day in November, 1908, when we were so completely flattened out."

The lesson, in brief, he said, was that the republicans in order to get in promised to revise the tariff down, but in doing it, they provided to revise it up.

The Speaker expressed thanks, and the gratitude of the country, to the brave, wise and patriotic republicans who co-operated with us in passing good bills. The secret of our marvelous success, he said, "is simple—unity of thought, purpose and action, frequent counsel together, a spirit of mutual conciliation, strict adherence to principle, with utmost latitude in non-essentials, subordination of individual desire to the general party good, sacrifice of personal ambitions in the earnest, honest, patriotic endeavor to serve the whole people with whatever of capacity God has blessed us."

Appeal on Record.
"We have won many victories," he said, "but what is better, we have formed the habit of victory." He suggested that General Grant's fame was earned not alone by things written but by the arduous greatness of things done, "fits our case like a glove."

"What the Democratic House accomplished, so far as it could for the amelioration of conditions," said he, "thwarted as it has been by a Republican President, is only an earnest intimation of what we will do when we come into full possession of the three branches of government. President Taft voted most of our bills of a remedial character, a prerogative unwisely exercised. He made his record; we made ours. On these records we appeal to the country with absolute confidence that when the polls close in November we will have elected a Democratic House, and Senate, Gov. Woodrow Wilson to the Presidency and Gov. Marshall to the vice presidency—positions which we believe and hope will prove of inestimable and enduring benefit to the entire American people, of whatever persuasion, religious or political."

PRIMARY CAMPAIGN
ENDS IN MICHIGAN

Republicans Lose Much of Their Ginger in Factional Strife But Expect to Hold Their Own.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Detroit, Mich., Aug. 24.—The campaign preceding the Michigan primaries closed today with many political rallies in all parts of the state. On Tuesday next all parties are to engage in state-wide primaries for the selection of candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, one United States senator, representatives in Congress, members of the legislature and city and county officers. The selection of candidates for state officers, excepting governor and lieutenant governor, will be made in state conventions to be held later. The campaign, on the whole, has been of rather a luke-warm variety. The Republicans, who have held almost undisputed control of the state for years, lost much of their ginger in the bitter factional fight between the Taft and Roosevelt adherents last spring. The fight left the party and its leaders more or less bewildered. Governor Chase M. Osborn, one of the early and ardent Roosevelt supporters, has apparently been left to flock by himself. Many others who in the past have been numbered among the Republican leaders of Michigan have taken no part in the present campaign.

The Democrats have found some encouragement in the factional strife of the enemy and are displaying more activity than in former years. But the Democrats, like the old-line Republicans, are bothered over the appearance of the third party in the field. The National Progressives will have a place on the primary ballot and will make nominations for all of the important places to be filled at the November election.

The Republican candidates for the gubernatorial nomination are Fred C. Martindale of Detroit, the present secretary of state, and Amos Musselman of Grand Rapids. Two years ago Musselman was Governor Osborn's chief opponent for the Republican nomination. Shortly before the third party convention this year he announced himself a strong progressive, but later he issued a statement declaring that he was not a third party man and that he would prefer defeat with the Republican party in his race for the governorship than to cast his lot with the new party.

The Democratic choice for the governorship is Woodbridge H. Ferris, who is the head of an educational institution at Big Rapids. Prof. Ferris has long been prominent in Democratic politics in Michigan. Twenty years ago he was a candidate for Congress and in 1904 he was an unsuccessful candidate for governor.

The National Progressive candidate for governor is L. Whitney Watkins of Jackson, who is now a Republican member of the state senate. J. D. Leand, a banker of Corunna, is to head the state ticket of the Prohibitionists.

United States Senator William Alden Smith whose term will expire next March, has no opposition in the Republican ranks for re-election. The Democratic aspirants for the toga are former Congressman Alfred Lucking of Detroit and George P. Hummer of Grand Rapids. T. H. Joslyn of Adrian is the third party choice for the senatorship, and W. A. Taylor of Battle Creek is the choice of the Prohibitionists.

EXPECT SETTLEMENT

UNCOVER A PLOT TO KILL CONGRESSMAN

Representative Johnson of Kentucky, Aware of Scheme Planned by District of Columbia Enemies.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Aug. 24.—An alleged scheme to kill Representative Johnson of Kentucky, chairman of the house committee for the District of Columbia, so as to head off certain proposed legislation has been disclosed to Mr. Johnson and a sworn statement has put the Kentucky man and his friends on guard. "I know all about it," said Mr. Johnson today. "But I'd rather not say what interests are back of the idea."

The affidavit of a Washington man detailing a conversation he heard on a street car in which one of those talking said he had been following Mr. Johnson for three nights to kill him, is locked up today in the office of Speaker Clark.

"The story is absolutely true," said Mr. Johnson. "Who are the parties?" he was asked. "I do not care to say now."

"What do you propose to do?" "Nothing unless there is an attempt to execute the threat. I have all the facts, but I do not want to go into details."

Mr. Johnson has been very aggressive in his advocacy of legislation affecting the District of Columbia. He is said to have incurred the enmity of many people who interpret his views as hostile to the interests of the city.

OROZCO HEMMED IN
BY FEDERAL FORCES

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Juarez, Aug. 24.—Somewhere south of Juarez, Pascual Orozco with 900 followers is said to be hemmed in by federal forces. Upon his success or failure is declared to hinge the fate of organized revolution in northern Mexico. The purpose of Orozco if he can escape from the trap set for him is to join the main rebel forces already moving toward the west coast with the object of securing control of a sea port through which ammunition may be imported and the revolution continued.

All but a few of Orozco's troops have been moved into Sonora. Orozco in leading Juarez miscalculated his time and his progress met with many difficulties. Anticipating his arrival at the coast Orozco had ordered ammunition shipped to some west coast point it is believed.

Officials here infer that the order issued yesterday from Washington for the U. S. gunboat Vicksburg to proceed from San Diego to Guaymas is in a great measure intended to prevent ammunition running there.

NEW EMPEROR READY TO ASSUME CONTROL

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Tokio, Aug. 24.—Hosinoto, the new emperor of Japan today completed the formality connected with his ascension to the throne. The concluding function was the reading of the premier of a special edict to the members of the diet assembled in extraordinary session. The document was textually as follows: "I have ascended to the throne of my imperial ancestors and expect to follow in the footsteps of the late emperor, obeying the guidance of my ancestors."

An appropriation of $750,000 to cover the expenses of the funeral of the late emperor was then introduced. The remainder of the edict will be borne by the emperor's private purse. The lying-in-state of the body of Mutsuhito is to be viewed by the entire diplomatic corps September 4th, who will be admitted to the death chamber after an audience with the new emperor and empress.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS ITS SESSION TODAY

SECOND SESSION OF 62ND CONGRESS ENDS AT SUNDOWN AFTER MONTHS OF STRENUOUS WORK.

RUSH WORK TO FINISH

House Takes Recess During Afternoon While Waiting for Report on General Deficiency Bill—Closing Business.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, D. C., Aug. 24.—With both houses of congress today marking time awaiting agreement on a single appropriation bill, the adjournment of the second session of the 62nd congress was assured before sundown. Early today both house and senate sent the general deficiency appropriation bill to a conference over a minor dispute and both settled down to clear the decks for adjournment.

The adjournment resolution was drawn in the house. Plans were arranged to have President Taft go to the capitol about mid-afternoon and take up the task of signing the bills passed in the final moments of the senate. The president expects to go directly.

The house took a recess until 4:30 to await a report of the conferees on the general deficiency.

Leaders of both houses went to the capitol today prepared to carry out their program for adjournment since die late in the afternoon. Only one obstacle stood in the way—Representative Victor Murdock and his point of order, no adjournment, which forced the house to adjourn last night without action on the postoffice appropriation bill.

Mr. Murdock's fight against the conference report on the postal appropriation bill providing payment of not more than $35,000 to the St. Louis Terminal Association for carrying mails across the Eads bridge, collapsed today when the report was adopted with only Mr. Murdock against it. This the leaders say practically assured adjournment of congress before night.

Some of the senate amendments to the general deficiency bill were disagreed to by the house and the bill was sent back for further adjustment. Representatives Cannon, Fitzgerald and Sisson were named as managers for the house. No serious delay was expected.

Matters Are Pushed.
Majority Leader Underwood moved that the house take a recess until two to permit the conference on the general deficiency measure to reach an agreement. He withdrew the suggestion, however, when a score of members asked for an opportunity to pass bills on the private calendar. A large number of local bills and resolutions were submitted and passed with virtually no debate.

Filing at Senate.

Minority leader Mann today took a parting fling at the senate when Representative Finley asked the passage of a resolution for the printing of several thousand copies of an agriculture department bulletin on the "hookworm" disease. "Is the resolution a privileged one?" inquired Mr. Mann. "It is," responded Mr. Finley. "I knew that the hookworm malady was privileged in the senate," remarked Mr. Mann amid laughter.

The house also authorized the printing of several thousand copies of reports of the gypsy moss and the cotton worm.

Starting Revelation.
The house committee on war department expenditures today reported that Major Beecher B. Ray, U. S. A., whom the president yesterday nominated to be deputy paymaster general of the army, has been engaged in political activity, particularly in the interests of President Taft, has been four times charged with serious offenses never vindicated and never been disciplined more severely than a reprimand.

Stanley Takes Shot.
Chairman Stanley of the house "steel trust" investigating committee fired a farewell broadside at former president Roosevelt today shortly before congress adjourned in reply to the Colonel's characterization of the work of the committee as "foolish and futile." Mr. Stanley charged that the former president desired no legislation which "would curb capitol or monopoly power, or control the distribution or control of the Harvester 'trust' or the United States steel corporation."

Signs Appropriation Bill.
President Taft today signed the sundry appropriation bill, finally agreed upon without provisions for the tariff. It carries appropriations approximately $112,000,000.

Senate Takes Recess.
At 3:52 o'clock the senate took a recess until six o'clock awaiting the report of the conferees on the general deficiency bill. President Taft had intended to leave Washington at 5:35 this afternoon but this action will cause a delay.

About Some Feature Films

WE WERE COMPARING vaudeville in general with feature films in general, and showed you why we are going to try the films exclusively for a few weeks. Now call to mind some vaudeville acts you have seen here, and ask yourself whether such are preferable to the following films extraordinary—

"The Life of Buffalo Bill," a Western biographical subject to be shown Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 30 to Sept. 1. In this, Col. Cody himself, supported by an enormous and able cast, re-enacts the most thrilling scenes of the great scout's adventuresome life. In 3 reels, "Fra Diavolo," a 3-reel Solax production of the great opera. We bring you this opera, which very few have the privilege of seeing, beautifully staged and acted in pictures—Sept. 2, 3 and 4.

Next is the Thanhouser "Lucile," after the poem by Owen Meredith. If you saw "Jess," or even "The Cry of the Children," by this company, you would not miss this at double or triple the admission price—Sept. 6, 7 and 8. Gordon Trent says in the N. Y. Morning Telegraph: "Lucile" is a wonder.

"A Victim of the Mormons" follows "Lucile," and you can compare the work of the greatest company in Northern Europe with Thanhouser's, as this is a "Great Northern." This is a sensational drama beautifully staged, acted and photographed, that holds its spectators with breathless interest.

A Russian story, "The Glass Coffin," by the same company, follows on Sept. 13, 14 and 15. This is a weird drama now being shown day after day to packed houses in Milwaukee.

We will give you the greatest films produced in the whole world, and our record of attendance will show us whether you prefer them to vaudeville.

LABOR HOSTS PLAN A BIG CELEBRATION

Program Announced For Labor Day Includes Excellent Attractions—Expect Many Visitors.

Monday, Sept. 2, will be a gala day for hosts of labor of Janesville, Beloit and Rockford. Plans for the big celebration which will be held in this city under the auspices of the local carpenters' union are now complete, and the number of attractions scheduled indicate that there will be nothing lacking in the way of entertainment.

Each of the cities joining in the celebration will be represented by a band and plenty of good music will add to the day's festivities. The first event will be the grand parade at ten o'clock in the morning. Labor organizations of the three cities will be in the line of march as well as elaborately decorated floats entered by local retail and manufacturing firms. A prize list will be arranged for the most attractive outfit.

Beginning at 12:30 the excitement will start at the Janesville Park association grounds with a ball game between picked teams from the commercial league. The race program will begin at 1:30 and promises to furnish plenty of thrills. Two auto races are scheduled; the first for twenty miles which is free for all, and a second for ten miles open to cars of $1,200 or under. A good list of entries is assured. Two horse races are included on the program and two motorcycle races. The first motorcycle race will be fifteen miles and the second ten miles, both events open to machines of the 30-50 class.

Governor McGovern's Labor Day proclamation which was issued this week reads as follows:

Land, capital and labor are the chief factors in the production of wealth, whereby all human wants are supplied, and the greatest of these is labor. "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread" was the stern condition imposed in the beginning; and it still obtains. Like the soil, the air and the sunshine, labor is indispensable to the maintenance of life. Labor's part in production, labor's claims in distribution and labor's interest in consumption, are therefore vital problems in every society that seeks industrial prosperity, social justice or moral improvement. Especially is this true now in Wisconsin, where the cause of workmen and working women have received and are still receiving so much thoughtful and sympathetic consideration. It is therefore appropriate in every way that the day set apart by law in recognition of the dignity of labor should be vividly celebrated by us this year. In accordance with these views, I, Francis E. McGovern, as governor of the State of Wisconsin, do hereby designate Monday, Sept. 2, 1912, as Labor day, and I earnestly recommend that in the observance of this day every opportunity be offered to working men and women for the enjoyment of this special holiday, and that all our people should show their appreciation of the significance of the occasion by their presence and assistance at such public exercises as may be provided.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Editor Gazette:

I would like to have a few words to say to the public in regard to the laws governing the speed of automobiles in a letter of recent date from J. A. Frear, secretary of state, he says:

It is well established that a common council of a city cannot in the exercise of a legislative grant or enact ordinances which are in conflict with the laws of the state.

The legislature seems to have recognized the fact that the different cities of the state were enforcing different speed ordinances and that such difference caused unnecessary annoyance to the users of automobiles who could not be familiar with the special regulation of each city. The legislative intent to do away with the confusion and to establish a uniform rule for all cities seems clear, and with this purpose in view it seems to me that an ordinance limiting the speed of automobiles to eight miles an hour is necessarily inconsistent with a statute prohibiting a speed exceeding fifteen miles an hour especially as the statute maker's provision for a lesser speed where the particular conditions render that necessary to safety in that it prohibits speed greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the width, traffic, and use of the highway, and the general usual rules of the road.

Certainly the laws cannot be "uniform in operation throughout the state" if each city may fix a maximum speed less than that fixed by the legislature. I am therefore, of the opinion that an ordinance fixing a lower rate of speed for automobiles than that fixed by the statute is invalid.

The above ruling is the decision of Attorney General Barclay, and is correct which is the law for all automobile owners of the state of Wisconsin to go by.

Yours truly, AUTO OWNER.

SEEKS WHEREABOUTS OF CHAS. SHEPARD

J. J. Shepard of Leetonia, Writes Local Police to Try and Locate Missing Brother.

Chief of Police George Appleby has received from Leetonia, Ohio, a letter requesting information as to the whereabouts of Charles N. Shepard, formerly of that place, who is supposed to be at present, or recently has been in this city. The writer is J. J. Shepard, a brother of the man sought, who desires to have his brother return at once because of critical illness of his father. The letter is as follows:

Leetonia, O., Aug. 23, '12

Chief of Police, Janesville, Wis.

Dear Sir: I would like much if you would help me find my brother who has been working in the West for the past year. I wired the last man he worked for and he said he went to Janesville. So I wired right to Janesville last evening, but they may not be able to reach him. Now I would like you to inquire at pool rooms and saloons. He liked to play pool and also would drink a little.

His name is Charles N. Shepard, but around here he was known as "Buckshot." He is tall, about 6 feet, 1 inch and weighs about 170 lbs. He worked as a lineman once and had two fingers burnt off one hand and the end of two off the other hand. He has worked on a railroad here and at a drop forge works, and also at a steel foundry.

Now if this man can be found, please tell him to come home at once, as his father is at the point of death with cancer of the stomach and can live but a few days. If you know that this man has left your town, please forward this letter to that town.

Now this man has been working as a farm hand, generally on a dairy farm and you might locate him at some of the feed stores or at the flour mills. Hoping that you can locate my brother. I know that you will do the best you can.

I remain, Yours respectfully, J. J. SHEPARD.

R. F. D. No. 1. The chief has made inquiries about the way to locate the man, but has thus far been unable to gain any information as to whether Shepard has been here.

DR. BEATON WRITES FURTHER OF TRIP

Local Divine, in Letter to Gazette, Tells of Experiences in Canadian Plaster Rock, New Brunswick, Can., Aug. 20, 1912.

The Editor Gazette:—

Dear Sir:—In my last letter I broke off just as our party arrived at the head waters of the Pobeque River and were preparing to come home by our canoe journey. In a trip like this, one of the most helpful things for a man is his complete ignorance of what is before him. If one knew what was ahead, he would never venture. If we had known of the rapids, the rocks and the long portages, I question if we would have had the courage to venture. But once in it, it is best to stay in, as there is now danger in getting out. This I realized one day when our guide was approaching quite a rapid where the quick water and the rocks made a roaring scene. "Will you get out, sir?" he asked. "no!" said I, brave as a sea lion. "Let her go!" And she was over before I got my breath.

We arrived at Serpentine Lake Saturday night, and it rained cats and dogs, and ducks and drakes all Sunday. So we rested and got ready for the run of the river on Monday. Next morning, still wet but with a promise of clearing we started out on our canoe journey of about 60 miles. Arriving at the dam, we fished for trout while the guides took the canoe over the falls. There I got two beauties on my first cast, but time was short and we had to leave this promising fishing hole. The river was now rapid and two considerable falls before us, but after getting some pictures, we arrived at the greater waters. This sort of experience was repeated for about 30 miles with but one mishap, and that took place by over confidence. At one wild rapid our guide thought he could ply the canoe over with all our baggage aboard; but she stuck and filled, and I could not help laughing to see all our boys, kettles, ropes, seats and other stuff floating down the river. As I told the photographer, some of my films might be spoiled with too much moisture for a whole river emptied itself on top of them.

After ten days of rain, and river I remarked to my host and friend that they cannot call me a dry preacher any more. We arrived at our camp at the forks of the Pobeque in good enough shape, however, but you would have been surprised at the week's washing we hung up over the big kitchen stove to dry that night. Waterproof coats, rubber boots and waders, and the whole camp baggage had been baptised in the river that day. Strange and never catches cold from those exposures and wettings and never takes sick. My comrade told me when he left home his wife was quite concerned about his health. He was eating little or nothing. But I could detect no signs of abstinence. He was first at the table and generally last to leave. He ate three meals a day and more for all that, but I saw him eat three. They say if you take a man out when sick and carry him into this wilderness, he will get well in quick time. The air, the water, the scenes, the freedom from care, all build one up; you eat like a navy and sleep like a hibernating bear.

We spent two days at the Salmon Pool on the river; and fished for the lovely salmon. Our luck was poor for the recent unprecedented rains had raised the waters and no fish were rising to the fly. One of our party got a fish in every cast and we had a fine salmon steak for breakfast. But we saw one of the most beautiful Salmon Pools in all the region, and felt that another visit we would give more time to this promising place. Next day saw us on the last leg of our journey down the river which was now a great broad-out stream and enabled us to paddle. We made the last 33 miles in about five hours and got at Plaster Rock in the evening in time for dinner. The rest is civilization, and conventional meals, and clean dry beds, and phonographs, and telephones and leisters and all the other uninteresting burdens of common life; and the gray mist on the hills, the sound of the waters, and the gleam of the lake, the leaping trout, and the flash of the wild creatures are all over and gone like the figures in a dream. So we come back to the daily round of duty, the common task and the home places, but we are not the same, the echo of the wild is in our hearts, and the struggle of simple, clean things in our spirit.

David Beaton.

CATARRH OF STOMACH RELIEVED BY PERUNA.

"I Do Honestly Believe Your Great Medicine, Peruna, Saved My Life."

MR. SAMUEL A. SEAL.

Mr. Samuel A. Seal, Route 2, Treadway, Tenn., writes:

"It gives me great pleasure to testify to the great good your medicine, Peruna, has done for me in a chronic case of catarrh of the stomach."

"I was confined to my bed for some time, and could not sit up. I was gradually growing worse. Seeing how Peruna was recommended for catarrh, I procured some. After taking it a few days I began to get better. I continued using it until I was able to go to work on the farm again and now I am in very good health."

"I do honestly believe your great medicine, Peruna, saved my life, and I cheerfully recommend it to like sufferers."

Special Notice—Many persons are making inquiries for the old-time Peruna. To such would say, this formula is now put out under the name of KA-TAR-NO, manufactured by KA-TAR-NO Company, Columbus, Ohio. Write them and they will be pleased to send you a free booklet.

Sashes Much in Evidence.

A glance at the windows of the shops show that the sash has come into its own again, and that all sorts of extravagances in that direction may be expected. Not only do children wear sashes, but the young girls and older matrons have them, the simple blue and pink ribbons of sweet 16 and the velvet and heavy silk for 60 being equally popular.

Sport Snap Shots

By Dad McCarty

A transatlantic voyage in a 25 foot yawl is being undertaken by three men as the first leg of a cruise around the world, according to officers of the liner Chiyo Maru, which arrived recently in San Francisco from the Orient. The Sea Queen, Capt. Henry Voss, left Yokohama the middle of July and was sighted by the Chiyo Maru several hundred miles out.

If the Boston Red Sox win the American league pennant this year, and it now looks as if they would, their success will not be due to a flashy run at some stage of the race, but to a steady interminable grind. They started out well, and kept up their hard pace, and today they're at the head of the league. The Red Sox make up a finely balanced, practical baseball machine. The team has been gradually rounding into form for several years and this season, it is figured, is just about "due."

Ted Merodith, the Mercerburg Academy youngster, who won the 400 and 800-meter races at the Olympic games, says that he felt "all in" before he won the longer race. "I was a mighty lucky fellow to get away with the 800-meter race," he recently declared, "and I am proud of that performance as can be, for the reason that I beat Sheppard and Braun, the best half-milers that ever ran."

"Just before the final in the 800 I felt as if I could hardly walk to the start," I wanted to set the pace, but Sheppard took the first turn and I was second with Braun tugging at my side to get past. We went along that way until we hit the last stretch, I was all in," but got some strength from some place, for I moved up and then came the final sprint home. I don't know how I did it, in fact I didn't know just what I was doing, but I caught and passed Sheppard about 20 yards from home and won the 800 meter race by a yard, with Sheppard second and Davenport third."

Walter Johnson, hailed by many as the leading pitcher in the American league, is ready for the supreme test. That is, he wants to pitch half the games for Washington during the remainder of the present season. If he can keep the pace he has set and pitch every second game from now on Johnson thinks, and many others are of a like opinion that Washington stands a good chance of copping the pennant this year. Thus far he has won two games out of every three played, certainly a record of which no pitcher need be ashamed.

There are a few persons in and around the city of Chicago who will shoot off no fireworks and sing no songs of joy if the Cubs win the National league pennant this year. In fact, there would be considerable grief in Jimmy Callahan's camp if such a thing should happen. It isn't jealousy that's eating the White Sox, or anything like that. It's plain business. If the Cubs fail to carry off the pennant, then the Chicago city series will be on, and such a series means about $1,000 per man to the White Sox.

FAST CYCLE RIDERS MEET TO DECIDE CHAMPIONSHIP.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 24.—The title of premier cyclist, held in days gone by by Arthur Zimmerman, Major Taylor, Iver Lawson and other riders of equal note, will be determined in the world's cycling championships, which are to begin tomorrow on the Newark Velodrome. It will be the nineteenth renewal of the event, which was inaugurated at the Chicago world fair in 1893. France, Germany and other European countries have sent over their star performers to compete with the speedy riders of America, and keen competitions are looked for in all of the events. Frank Kramer, for eleven years champion bicycle rider of America, will compete for the first time for the world's title.

Why You Sigh.

When anyone sighs unconsciously it means they have been taking short breaths and not drawing sufficient oxygen into the lungs. Finally, the lungs must have more oxygen, they are hungry for it, and so the lungs exert their right and actually force you to take in a great breath of air. This gives them the needed oxygen, and they can go on with their work for a while longer, when they will force another "sigh," which is in reality helping themselves to more oxygen in spite of yourself.

GINK AND DINK

AT HARLEM PARK.

September 8th to September 15th will be Carnival and Mardi Gras week at Harlem Park near Rockford.

Various special days will be put on during this week such as Grange Day, for which there will be special excursions from all points on the Interurban; a lodge night, offering a suitable prize for the lodge registering the best attendance; water fete, with prizes for the best decorated canoe and club putting up the best appearance; fancy dress ball in the dancing pavilion with prizes for the best costume. The final band concert of the season will be given during this week, probably Friday, September 13th.

This is the first season that a Carnival and Mardi Gras week has been put on at Harlem park, and the big sensational drawing card for that time will be the return engagement of Henry A. Phelps in single parachute drops beginning Saturday, September 8th to and including Friday September 13th. During this time he will also put on an exhibition two live polar bears, and on Saturday September 14th and Sunday September 15th the last day of the park, he will make ascension carrying with him the two polar bears, and make triple parachute drops with same, which will without doubt be one of the most novel and unique balloon exhibitions ever given in Rockford.

Numerous other special features are planned for this week, the details of which will be divulged later.

BIG RIFLE TOURNEY OPENS AT SEA GIRT

Picked Shots From all Over United States Gather for Annual Interstate Shoot.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Sea Girt, N. J., Aug. 24.—Picked rifle and revolver shots of ability and wide reputation were on hand in force today for the opening of the annual interstate rifle tournament under the auspices of the National Rifle Association of America and the New Jersey Rifle Association. The tournament has attracted teams and individual marksmen representing all of the arms of the regular service and the military organizations of many states. Iowa, Texas, Illinois, Montana, Arizona and other Western states are particularly well represented.

The National Match, under the auspices of the New Jersey Rifle Association, is the most important new contest this year. Other contests that will command the attention of the camp will be that for the $500 Wimbledon Cup, presented to the National Rifle Association of Great Britain; the President's match, for the military championship of the United States, and the Sea Girt championship with which the tournament will end September 7, the winner of which will be presented with the Sea Girt championship medal by Governor Woodrow Wilson, who will attend the competitions.

MARSHALL P. RICHARDSON PROGRESSIVE REPUBLICAN

Candidate for Assemblyman

To the Republican Electors of the First Assembly District, Rock County:

As a candidate for the nomination of Assemblyman on the Republican ticket at the primaries September 3rd, I have been asked by the Gazette to state my position on the Income Tax.

It requires a statesman-like view and a practical knowledge of the whole field of taxation in order to form a correct conception of the place of the Income Tax in our state governmental machinery. This tax cannot be intelligently considered as an isolated piece of legislation. It has been made an integral part of our system of taxation and he who glibly declares that he stands for the repeal of this Tax without an acquaintance, on the one hand, with the evils which it is designed to eradicate, and on the other hand, the void which would be created by its repeal, is not qualified to participate in legislation.

As I have been for seven years a member of the Equalization of Taxes Committee of the County Board and paid on behalf of my clients, one per cent of all the taxes paid in the City of Janesville, I have some practical knowledge of this subject.

The Income Tax is a substitute for and repeals the tax on Moneys and Credits which exists in nearly all the states in the Union. This Moneys and Credits Tax is the most iniquitous piece of governmental machinery in operation in the United States. It puts a premium on dishonesty, and releases the man of money or of large resources in the different forms of intangible personal property from all the burdens of taxation if he simply lies about his property and denies that he has money or assessable credits. In the country districts and in small communities the assessor may know what moneys, notes, bonds, mortgages and accounts the tax payer possesses, but in the city he cannot know. With Three Millions of Dollars of cash in the banks of Janesville alone, only about Seventy Thousand Dollars of credits of all kinds were discovered by the assessors in Janesville and Beloit, up to the time of the recent reassessment in Janesville. The honest man who turned in his moneys and credits to the assessor, the man of small means who is not posted, and the unfortunate whose financial condition was known to the assessor bore not only their share of the tax but also that of their neighbors as well.

With the knowledge gained by the enforcement of the Income Tax, if this tax were now repealed, and the Moneys and Credits Tax re-enacted, the latter would be largely enforced. Such enforcement would be an even greater evil than the former non-enforced law. If all that has been said against the Income Tax were true, it still would not do half the harm that an enforced Moneys and Credits Tax could accomplish. The latter would drive capital out of the state. Further if we should repeal the Income Tax without re-enacting the Tax on Moneys and Credits, the local revenues would have to be obtained almost entirely through a tax on land values which already bear four-fifths of the burdens of taxation. Only those who favor the Henry George Single Tax theory, can logically favor the repeal of the Income Tax. Others are either ignorant of the subject of taxation, short-sighted or unwilling to bear their just proportion of the burdens of local and state government.

I think the present Income Tax should be altered in some important features. Corporations probably ought to be taxed by the same method as individuals.

I believe that the Income Tax has made Wisconsin a better field for investment than that of any other western state. The investor prefers a lower rate of interest with greater security, to a higher rate of interest with less security. His moneys and credits in Wisconsin are now safe from taxation of their principal. All dealers in investment securities say that the tax on interest of an investment is more than compensated for by the relief from the fear of the taxation of the principal. At the recent Bankers' Convention in Milwaukee, it was stated that there are Three Hundred Millions of Dollars in the banks of this state. There is now more money demanding investment in Wisconsin, than ever before, both by residents of Wisconsin and non-residents. The chief cause of this is the freedom from taxation of the principal of the investment, which the investors have secured by the Income Tax.

I desire also to state here that I believe in home rule for cities, in equal suffrage, and a modification of the Industrial Accident Law, so that it will only apply to those who permanently employ more than eight or ten men.

MARSHALL P. RICHARDSON,
Candidate For Assemblyman.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The boy who starts out in life with a well equipped mind, and a strong and vigorous body, does not always succeed, but he never fails to charge his failure to causes beyond his control.

The boy's weakness, in this regard, is a common weakness, shared to large extent by all of us. The man who fails in business never thinks of personal responsibility in the matter, however much he may be at fault.

The farmer who was born half an hour late, and never caught up, is always two weeks behind with his seedling and harvest, but the weather, and not his shiftlessness, is held accountable for failure.

The trouble with the most of us is that we are so near perfect, in our own estimation, that we never make mistakes. We don't take kindly to advice, and our sense of observation is so obtuse that the knowledge we possess comes to us through the hard knocks of experience.

The desire to shirk responsibility is born in us, and as life advances we cultivate it so studiously that it becomes a habit. The spirit which possessed Adam to charge his downfall to Eve, who in turn transferred it to the snake, is as old as the race, and it has lost nothing in the passing of time.

George Washington, and his cherry tree hatchet, have long been held up as models for American boys and girls, but the standard is too exalted and the average boy continues to blame the other fellow, while the average girl seldom admits that she is at fault.

This habit of placing the blame for the ills of life on somebody else is not confined to the family and social life, but enters so largely into the fabric of our community and national life that it becomes a disturbing factor.

The unrest and discontent, which prevails to such large extent today is due to the fact that as a people we have shirked personal responsibility, and as a result the busy reformer and designing politician have got in their work.

Our taxes have soared skyward, and all sorts of unreasonable laws have been placed on our statute books, because by neglect or carelessness we have sent men to our legislature who represented the man and his hobbies, rather than the people.

Who is responsible for the income tax law, just now so thoroughly censured and discussed all over the state? You and I passed it by either not voting at all or not voting against it. The chances are that we belong to the 75 per cent of voters who did not vote at all, as the law was passed by less than 25 per cent, and the men who supported it admit now that they didn't know what they were voting for.

Mr. North of Edgerton, one of the candidates for the Assembly, from this district, said, the other day, that he has asked a large number of voters why they supported the law, and almost to a man they said they never knew that they voted for it.

The same indifference which created the law, and a lot of other reforms, that caused our taxes to climb from three to thirteen million dollars, will continue to oppress us, unless we are interested enough to support men like Mr. North in the present campaign.

What is true of the state is true of the nation. People whose brain was just large enough to discuss the weather and the Standard Oil company—both easy because they never talk back—have had a vision, and now tackle the high cost of living, the railroads and "big business," with all the wisdom of a seer.

When Bryan launched his free silver campaign, on the 16 to 1 issue, this class of people believed that cheap money meant plenty of it for everybody, and an army six million strong was influenced to support a doctrine which meant repudiation and bankruptcy.

The progressive movement, which is sweeping over the country like a tidal wave, is capturing a lot of people who are led to believe that with the intrepid Colonel in the saddle, prices of all commodities will tumble, and the cost of living greatly reduced, while short hours of labor and a wage scale fixed by law, will provide every man a competency.

Some theories are spun so fine that they are about as practical as cobwebs. This is one of them. Better saw wood and make hay while the sun shines, for the nation will never see any better times than it has during the past decade.

We charge the packers as being responsible for the high price of meat, when they have no more to do with it than the school teachers. The government spent ten years of time, and a lot of money, on the same foot proposition.

The high price of meat is due to heavy demand and short supply. Times are good and we eat double the meat we did during the last Cleveland administration.

A son of Phillip Carroll, an old Janesville butcher, is traveling for a Chicago packing house. He said, the other day: "If the government wants to regulate the price of meat why don't they go at it right by increasing the supply?"

Asked how he would do it, he said: "The simplest thing in the world. Just prohibit the sale of veal." And then he continued: "Do you know that 13,000,000 veal calves were slaughtered last year?"

That's the story in a nutshell. Cut out the sale of veal for five years and double the beef supply, and prices will take care of themselves, and nobody will suffer, for half the veal slaughtered isn't fit to eat anyway.

About ten years ago the automobile industry was introduced into this country. The man who had the temerity to buy one was considered a crank, and when he wanted to exercise it he took it out on a back street.

Today they are the most common vehicle in use. You can stand on any prominent street corner and watch $100,000 worth of them go by in a few minutes. It is just possible that these and other luxuries, which have come to be necessities, have something to do with the high cost of living.

But the automobile is a blessing in disguise. The industry furnishes work at good wages to an army of men who through the evolution in business have been crowded out of other trades. It also opens up a new field for young men, for every town has its garage and the supply of men who can overhaul an engine and keep it in repair, is far below the demand. As a people we are paying high for our living, but we are living as never before, enjoying comforts and luxuries such as no other people on earth enjoy. We ought to be contented and happy.

A gentleman passing along East Milwaukee street, one day this week, noticed a little group of boys in the doorway of a store. A couple of girls, Misses in short dresses—perhaps a dozen years old—came out of the store and crossed the street.

The boys did not know them but did not hesitate to address them, in a familiar way, to which the girls paid no attention. As they reached the middle of the street one of the boys said: "See the one with legs like a cow!"

That's Janesville as it is today. Who's to blame? You and I, the voters and taxpayers, for tolerating such conditions. This class of insults is of daily occurrence. Is it any wonder that our girls are lured into saloons before they are out of their teens, and well on the road to ruin? One man said, "I never will allow my daughter to go to the high school, for I won't permit her to walk the streets and be insulted by the hoodlums and loafers who are permitted to congregate."

We tolerate sixty saloons, when we know that half of them can't live and do business within the law. Why? Because we lack the moral backbone to cut the number down and make it possible for the men in the business to make a lawful living.

The people have a right to expect much of the new commission form of government, and the men elected to administer it. They said, by a good majority, that they were tired of a wide open town and a reckless administration.

We are long on laws, but short on enforcement, and conditions in many respects have not improved. It is no credit to any city to be run by the saloons, and the men in sympathy with them, and the commission should realize that the people had become weary of this sort of domination.

It has the moral support of the law.

respecting element of the city, and should not hesitate to see that the laws are enforced. In the meantime, we, the voters, can not shirk responsibility, and ask, Who is to blame? To rid the city of some of the nuisances which infect it the commission may need the support of organized backing, and this should be freely accorded if needed. Better Janesville means a higher standard of public morality as well as improved business methods. Are you willing to back the commission?

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

A DOMESTIC TRAGEDY.

The man, wife and little son came aboard the train, settling themselves opposite me, the woman and boy on one seat, the man facing them on the other.

Ill tempered and unhappiness marked the woman's face. She was extremely nervous. The man's face was kind, but weak.

The boy was a normal, active little unit.

For a time the child was quiet. The sense of company, of motion and change of scene occupied him. Then he began to wiggle. His mother spoke to him sharply.

After a few moments the little man threw his arms around his mother's neck and kissed her. Her settled frown momentarily disappeared.

The man went back to the dining car. By and by the boy climbed up and looked backward over the car. The mother grabbed him, glaring, and sat him down roughly.

When the child made the least movement she scolded him in a threatening way. Once he got into the other seat. She angrily clutched him and said, "If you don't sit still I'll slap you good."

The man came back from the diner. Plainly he had been drinking. He tried to play with the boy, but the mother's eyes blazed as she pushed him back and shook the boy.

The father grinned and winked at his little son. Evidently the latter knew his father was tipsy, for the child's face was very grave.

The father got up again, saying he would go to the smoking car. The woman uttered no word and did not look at her husband.

I had been spectator at the disclosure of a sad domestic tragedy. And I wondered—where did it begin?

Was the man driven to drink by the woman's violent temper, or had she been pushed into bitterness and loss of love by her husband's drinking?

But I thought most of all of the boy. The woman was on the road to desperation, perhaps the insane asylum, and the man was on the verge of ruin, but what of the boy?

He is the only one in all the world who can save that couple—and himself. Will "a little child lead them"—away from disaster?

Or—

IN THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON.

Wealth.
A pipe, a rock.
A place to sit
And watch the birds
Of summer flit
From bough to bough
And warble lays
Of gladness brought
By summer days.
A hammock in
A shady place.
A chance to look
On nature's face
In admiration
Of her charms
We find so oft
Where'er the fides
Of commerce flow.
A chance to stop
Beside the way
Retiring from
The worldly fray.
A chance to drop
The cares of life.
Forgetting all
Of worldly strife
To have content
And easy mind,
And pleasant thoughts
Of humankind.
Enough to eat
And perfect health
That's what makes up
Our dream of wealth.

The Militant Suffragents.
M. S. writes: "The object of our order was to make our wives do some of the stunts that we have to and see how they like it. I had a new shirt made that looked up the back with 316 hooks and eyes and asked my wife to hook it up for me. She gave me the ha-ha and walked out of the room and I missed the party. We can never put our suffragent stunt over and you may as well erase my name from the list of members."

R. D. B. writes in as follows: "The theory of our organization is immense but it doesn't seem to work out in practice. I told my wife that I would not crawl out yesterday and build the kitchen fire and she said she didn't care. She didn't want any breakfast anyhow and would just as soon stay in bed all day as not. Result—No breakfast, no dinner and a cold lunch. There is no use talking, the girls have got it on us."

Eternal Vigilance.
Various are the devices for the defense and security of cities, as palisades, walls, ditches and other such kinds of fortification, all of which are the results of the labors of the hand and maintained at great expense. ## ENJOY CELEBRATION OF GOLDEN WEDDING

MR. AND MRS. MYRON H. GIBBS OBSERVE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY WITH FAMILY REUNION.

RECALLS FORMER DAYS

Marriage Fifty Years Ago Closely Associated With War Time Events—Many Friends Extend Regards.

Surrounded by relatives and a few intimate friends, Mr. and Mrs. Myron H. Gibbs, both residents of this city since early childhood, celebrated their golden wedding at their home, 1312 South Third street, yesterday afternoon. Between eighty and one hundred guests participated in the happy event, three generations being represented in the party.

The golden reception was largely in the nature of an immense family reunion, many cousins, grand nieces and grand nephews as well as more immediate relatives of the bride and groom of fifty years being present.

MR. AND MRS. MYRON H. GIBBS.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs were assisted in receiving their guests by their only daughter, Mrs. May C. Smith, of this city, the receiving party standing in front of a bank of golden rod, golden glow, yellow daisies and sunflowers, massed effectively in one corner of the double parlors. Great bouquets of the same golden blossoms and of yellow nasturtiums and pansies were used in profusion, throughout the home, festoons of yellow also adorning the doorways and windows. The porch columns were twined with yellow blossoms and a large flag was draped above the entrance.

The flag and the presence of a number of Grand Army men in the gathering gave an appropriate touch to the celebration, the occasion which commemorated having been one of the war weddings of the days of '62. Military reminiscences are closely associated with the event of fifty years ago, the ceremony having taken place at 9 o'clock in the evening after the Sunday night church service and the young groom leaving next morning for the war. It was early in the struggle between the North and South and the young recruit was rejected and sent home. A year later, when President Lincoln issued a call for men, he again offered his services to his country and was accepted, serving throughout the struggle in Company A of the Thirty-fifth Wisconsin. Three of his four brothers also fought with Wisconsin regiments, as did also the young bride's three brothers, Albert, Edward C. and Levi K. Alden.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs were born in New York state. Mrs. Gibbs, who is 68 years old, in Scipio, Sept. 26, 1844, and Mr. Gibbs, who is 78, in Putnam county, May 13, 1836. They both came to Wisconsin in 1846. Mrs. Gibbs being then a child of two years and Mr. Gibbs a boy of ten. They have lived in this city ever since and have resided in their present home for forty-six years, moving into it June 15, 1866, soon after Mr. Gibbs returned from the war.

Mrs. Gibbs is the oldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James M. Alden, pioneer residents of Janesville and her wedding took place at the Alden homestead on North Bluff street. Mr. Alden owned and operated the first brickyard in this city and many of the red-brick in the older buildings in this part of the state were made by him. His brother, the late Levi K. Alden, whose family was represented at yesterday's golden wedding by two daughters, Mrs. Frank C. Cook and Miss Harriet Alden of this city, was the founder and first editor of the Gazette.

The Rev. M. P. Kinney, pastor of the Congregational church, performed the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Emma L. Alden and Myron H. Gibbs, Aug. 24, 1862. They were attended by the bride's young cousin, Miss Mary Louise Peterson, who was the guest of honor at yesterday's celebration, and by the groom's brother, Silas Gibbs. Mr. Gibbs is the only surviving member of a family of five sons and one daughter. Mrs. Gibbs has two brothers and two sisters living. E. C. Alden of this city, L. K. Alden of Waukegan, Miss Mary J. Alden of Janesville, and Mrs. Rose S. Penton of Milwaukee.

Of four children born to Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs only the youngest daughter is living, they having lost their eldest daughter when she was seventeen and their two sons when twenty-four years and six months old respectively. Besides their daughter, Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs have three grandchildren, Reinette, Mildred and John Smith. The grandchildren took charge of the entertainment of the third generation at yesterday's celebration, all the children being seated at a long table on the lawn during the supper with which the golden wedding came to a happy climax.

The reception took place at 2:30 o'clock and late in the afternoon the supper was served, the guests, with the exception of the bride party, being seated at small tables decorated with golden hearts and yellow blossoms. At the bride table were seated Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs, their maid of honor of fifty years ago, the sisters and one brother of the bride, L. K. Alden being unable to be present, and Mrs. O. W. Gibbs of Richland Center and Mrs. Silas Gibbs of this city, widows of two brothers of the groom. The supper was served by the daughter, Mrs. Smith, and by five nieces, Mrs. Louise F. Brand and Miss Ada R. Penton of Milwaukee, Mrs. Harry P. Robinson of Eau Claire, Mrs. Roy C. Palmer of Janesville, and Mrs. Eron R. Mead of Hartford, Wis.

Among the guests from out of the city were Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Alden, two sons and two daughters, of Chicago; Mrs. Rose S. Penton, Mrs. Louise F. Brand, and Miss Ada R. Penton of Milwaukee; Mrs. H. P. Robinson, two daughters and one son, of Eau Claire; Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Mead and two daughters, of Hartford; Mrs. O. W. Gibbs and Miss Margaret Fogg, Richland Center; Mr. and Mrs. Will Kinney, Fond du Lac; Mr. and Mrs. Orville Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Smith Gibbs, and O. J. Gibbs of Aurora, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. A. D. wishes which were showered yesterday upon the couple just completing a half century of happy wedded life. Their golden wedding was the second which the Alden family has celebrated in Janesville, the late Mr. and Mrs. James M. Alden, father and mother of Mrs. Gibbs, having observed theirs in similar manner, May 1, 1837.

CLASS HAS RETURNED FROM CAMP AT LAKE

Girls' Class of Baptist Sunday School Returned Yesterday From Outing at Lake Koshong.

The J. F. T. A. class of girls in the Baptist Sunday school, returned Friday afternoon from a nine days' outing at Lake Koshong, Wis. The party consisted of Eva Badger, Marie Dobson, Florence Douglas, Lusine Jones, Harriet Pufahl, Marie Richardson, June and Flora Robinson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jewett chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Currier, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Olsen. On the Wednesday evening before they came home, the girls celebrated the twenty-fourth birthday of their teacher, Mrs. Currier. The affair was kept secret by the girls and when Mrs. Currier returned late in the afternoon from a long row on the lake, she was surprised to find the dining room beautifully decorated with golden rod, daisies and wild vines. A splendid supper had been carefully prepared and was enjoyed by all. After supper a birthday gift was presented to Mrs. Currier by the president of the class, Miss Eva Badger. The girls report a delightful time while at the lake.

WERE ENTERTAINED AT THE KELLOGG HOME LAST NIGHT.

Members of Dr. Richards and A. G. Austin's Sunday School Classes Entertained Last Night.

At the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Kellogg, south of the city, the members of the Sunday school classes of the Methodist church taught by A. G. Austin and Dr. F. T. Richards, were entertained last evening. The members of the party met at the church last evening and part of the number were conveyed to the Kellogg home on a hayrack, others going in private rigs. The evening was most pleasantly spent with music and a social good time. Delicious light refreshments were served. Mr. Austin, who is soon to wed Miss Mabel Isaacs, was presented with a handsome oak rocker, Rev. T. D. Williams making the presentation speech.

FIRST NATIONAL GATHERING OF THE CLAN OF MACLEAN.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Glasgow, Aug. 24.—Historic Duart Castle, known to all visitors of the Isle of Mull, was the scene today of the first national gathering held by any Scottish family since 1745. It was a reunion of the Clan Maclean, of which Colonel Sir Fitzroy Donald Maclean, Bart., is the hereditary head. The Maclean family is represented in all parts of the world and is said to number not less than 35,000 members in the United States and Canada. Sir Allan Maclean, who held Quebec against the American forces of Montgomery and Arnold, was a member of the clan, as was Colonel Allan Maclean of Delaware, who fought valiantly on the side of the Americans in the Revolution.

SUSPEND SENTENCE FOR EUGENE WALL

CHARGED WITH HAVING OFFERED RESISTANCE TO AN OFFICER IN DISCHARGE OF HIS DUTY PLEADS GUILTY.

PRECEDENT IS NOW SET

At Request of District Attorney and Chief of Police Prisoner Is Set at Liberty During Good Behavior.

With the pleading guilty of Eugene Wall, to the complaint of offering resistance to an officer in pursuit of his duty, a precedent has been set in the local court that will do much towards assisting the police in preserving order in the city. True, the sentence was deferred, but only after Mr. Wall had apologized to the officers and the district attorney and Chief of Police had asked the suspension of sentence.

Mr. Wall was charged with offering resistance to the officers, by seizing Officer Sam Brown's arm, while he was taking Hugh Waggoner to the lockup on Wednesday evening. Waggoner resisted the officers and fought most savagely. Several citizens, Mr. Wall among them, freely criticized the officers for their action, but Mr. Wall was only one who actually laid hands on the officers.

It is possible that warrants will be sworn out for two others in the mob that surrounded the officers and by their actions urged the prisoner to redouble his efforts to escape, but it is felt that the present case will teach a decided lesson to the class of citizens who are free to criticize the officers in their arrest of criminals.

It was at the recommendation of Chief of Police George Appleby and District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie, that sentence was suspended in the Eugene Wall case, as he pleaded guilty this morning in municipal court to the charge of offering resistance to an officer. The examination had been set for this morning in municipal court, but when the case was called for hearing, Mr. Wall, through his attorney, M. O. Mouat, waived the right of examination, waived the reading of the information, and filed a petition for an immediate trial, entering a plea of "guilty."

He made an apology to the police officers for his conduct, and Chief of Police Appleby made a request to the judge that sentence be suspended, as Mr. Wall's wife and family would suffer in case a fine were imposed. The district attorney also made a statement to the effect that the case was not brought to punish Mr. Wall in particular, but rather to determine what is the attitude of the people with regard to interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty, knowing, as they did, they had recourse to the fire and police commission in case they did not approve of the conduct of any of the officers in making an arrest.

The attitude of the people, he said, would determine to a large extent what action would be taken by the police in making arrests, whether they would feel that they could act without interference and resistance in making arrests, or be forced to release their prisoner should sign of fight.

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

GIVE RETURNING ATHLETES A CEREMONIOUS WELCOME

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Aug. 24.—A mid the continuous applause from thousands of spectators who lined Broadway from Forty-second street to Park Place, the victorious American athletes who took part in the Olympic games at Stockholm paraded to the City Hall this morning to listen to addresses of welcome from Mayor Gaynor and other eminent representatives of the city, the state and the nation. The demonstration was one of the most notable of its kind ever seen in New York. In addition to the Olympic team the parade comprised divisions of regular troops from Governors Island and Forts Hamilton and Wadsworth, marines and bluejackets from the navy yard, detachments of boy scouts, amateur and professional baseball teams and thousands of boys from the public schools bearing flags.

Largest Rose Tree.

Germans claim to possess the largest rose tree in Europe. It is found in Herr Wehrle's garden at Freiburg. It extends 115 feet at the top and forms a spacious bower. Originally it was a wild rose, on which a Chromatella rose was grafted in 1881.

ARRAIGNED EIGHT DRUNKS IN COURT

Four Received Jail Sentences This Morning, Three Paid Fines And One Put on Good Behavior.

Today was a busy day in municipal court in the way of drunkenness cases, and eight offenders were haled before the justice for that offense. Danger in Continuous Crops.

The growth of a number of successive crops of the same plant has been lately found not only to exhaust the soil for that plant, but to develop an active poison for it. Steam distillation of a wheat-sick soil yielded a crystalline substance that is toxic to wheat, and from a soil exhausted for cowpeas a crystalline substance was obtained that is toxic to cowpeas but not to wheat.

DR. BURRUS FINDS AN AFFINITY IN VIRGINIA BROOKS

Janesville Doctor Who Wrote to Reverend Morrill in Minneapolis Requests Introduction.

At last Dr. A. P. Burrus has found his ideal woman and the next thing for him to do is to secure an introduction. The doctor who wrote to Reverend Morrill of Minneapolis some days ago asking him to make good his offer to introduce "Bashful Old Bachelors" to young ladies, giving his requirements of what he considered the perfect woman, has again written Dr. Morrill asking him to make good his offer and introduce him to the woman he has decided on as perfect.

Not only does Dr. Burrus believe he has found his affinity, but also he would like to aid her in her crusade work of cleaning up Hammond, Indiana, for he has selected, unknown to the young lady in question, Miss Virginia Brooks, the Joan of Arc of West Hammond, and all because she looks like his grandmother. But let Dr. Burrus tell his own story in his own language.

"I am in love with Virginia Brooks of West Hammond. I like her because she looks like my grandmother who came from Rhode Island. Her hair was shiny black and she had snapping black eyes. One morning she went down town and got nine yards of calico and made a dress up in the same day all herself and had it on to eat supper. She could make good mince pies too, and whip her weight in wild cats and Miss Brooks can do it. She is fully up to the standard given to Reverend G. L. Morrill Minneapolis. I would like to go down there to help her reclaim that wicked city and if Reverend Elder Morrill will give me an introduction as 'he promised to all 'bashful bachelors,' perhaps I may."

It will be remembered that Dr. Burrus gave the following requirements for his ideal woman:

"Now, if you have any lady bachelor or from 25 to 35 that would like a first-class home, one that will come near physical standard and has good health, you may give her my address. But I do not want my name made public in newspapers or otherwise."

"A standard woman in stature is 5 feet 4 to 5 inches. When arms are extended the measure from tip to tip of fingers would be equal to height."

She would have chest measurement near 35 inches and weigh nearly 130 pounds. Must not have hollow back. Must not have shoulder blades prominent like wings or have short legs from knee down. Must not have pug nose or thick lips. Under lip must not be short with upper teeth protruding. She must not have skin disease or enlarged glands about neck."

"The head should measure around base of brain 21 1/2 inches. From tip of ears, up over head, 11 to 12 inches. From top of nose over occipital spine, about 18 inches. The last measure is most important. She must not have lop ears. Rather fine hair and fine features preferred and a well developed chin. Good cooks and nurses are generally preferable and make best wives."

"A standard man is one-tenth above the female sex."

Just how he is certain Miss Brooks answers these requirements is not known. Nor does the doctor say that he is certain she makes her own dresses as his grandmother did or bake mince pies or whip her weight in wild cats, but evidently he is willing to take a chance.

Just at present Dr. Burrus' whereabouts are a mystery. The sign on his office door says he is out of the city until Monday next. Perhaps he has gone down to West Hammond to make a personal investigation. Meanwhile several letters have been received from aspiring ladies who believe they meet his requirements and some of them doubtless enclose measurements to substantiate their statements. One widow at Lake Kegonsa, is quite insistent in her inquiries and has even sent a stamped envelope for an answer.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT OPENS BIG CANADIAN EXHIBITION.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 24.—The Canadian National Exhibition was formally opened this afternoon by the Duke of Connaught, who, pressing an electric button, started the machinery in the various big buildings. The opening exercises were witnessed by an immense crowd. The music for the occasion was furnished by the Scots Guard Band.

The new Government building, costing $165,000, and several other large structures have been added to the exposition since last year, and the exposition itself contains many new features. The exhibition will continue until September 9. One of the attractive features will be the great camp and review of boy cadets, who are gathering here from England, Australia, Canada and other parts of the empire.

Not His Job.

At Atlantic City a woman bather had got beyond her depth and was struggling helplessly in the water. A boat was soon put out and just as the man was reaching over to grasp the lady a sassy wave separated her from her wig, whereupon she instantly cried: "Oh, save my hair! Save my hair!" "Madam," responded the guard with dignity, "I may be a life saver, but I am not a hair restorer."

For the Gardener.

A case for gardeners is as neat as it is possible, to make such a compendium of tools. In it are harbored a pruning knife, thorn scissors and those for gathering flowers, rosegay and a measure, a note book and other convenient items.

Twist Off Top.

Very few people, with the exception of those living in a pineapple country, know how to remove the top from the fruit. Hold the apple firmly with one hand, catch the top with the other, and twist around. It comes out easily—Good Housekeeping.

HITCHCOCK WILL PLAN PARCEL POST SYSTEM

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Aug. 24.—Postmaster general Hitchcock announced today he would confer immediately with members of the interstate commerce commission respecting rates for the parcels post system authorized by congress. The system will be put into operation as soon as possible. "I believe," said Mr. Hitchcock, "that domestic parcels post will prove of immense benefit to the people of the country and eventually will afford substantial support to the postoffice department."

ever, on the other hand, there has been little selling of investment securities. The market again seems to have reached a level from which it will require some strong incentive to continue the advance. Stocks are selling on a basis to yield about the same rate as is obtainable for commercial paper. For the time being, the future trend of prices seems to depend on money rates more than any other factor. If the present prediction that a "Red Hot" political campaign will be under way early in September is true, that will also have an influence. In the meantime, prices are at a standstill with a strong expectation that there will be a further advance in some of the industrial shares and Public Service Corporation securities. Little is expected from the railroad stocks.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES. The Coal Roads—Lehigh & Reading. The proposed investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the rates now being charged by the anthracite coal carrying roads, of which the above roads are the most important, is against prices for these shares. It is estimated that present freight rates on coal are about 16 1/2 higher per mile of haulage than on merchandise. Should the Commission order a reduction in coal rates, it would seriously affect the earnings of these roads; such a reduction is not improbable.

Western Electric.—This company is reported to be doing a record business and it is rumored that the stock will be put upon a 4 per cent dividend basis at the Directors' Meeting in September. The shares have had a rapid rise; nevertheless, it looks as though speculation might carry the advance further.

COPPERS. The demand for the metal at 17c per lb. and better, shows no sign of abating. Producing companies will net very large earnings for the present year, such earnings will no doubt result in increased dividends by many companies. The advance in the Calumet and Hecla dividend rate, this week, foreshadows such a general advance.

STOCK MARKET. With few exceptions, prices are lower than they were ten days ago. The strength in individual issues gives the market a deceptive appearance. That prices should lag in the face of the budget of encouraging Stock Market News is disconcerting and would seem to indicate that the upward movement was caused largely by the covering of short contracts. There has been no noticeable investment buying. However, the last of them. Watermelons which have been so very fine this year are still very good and they are very plentiful. There were not any changes in prices on the local market this morning and the prices remain the same as yesterday. The prices of the market for today are as follows:

Chiropractic Will Lift You Out of the Depths of Misery

You Who Suffer Can Find Relief. Modern Science Proves That With the Right Assistance Nature Will Make You Well.

Don't Procrastinate. Don't Suffer Another Day. Investigate Chiropractic Today.

At This Time of the Year Hay Fever and Asthma Sufferers Are Usually in the Utmost Distress With These Maladies. Already This Season Many Sufferers Have Found Relief Through Chiropractic.

You can't afford to be half sick. You may be about to get sick and not know it. For some time perhaps, your spine has been slightly deranged, you have been slowly getting to a point where the break comes. Diseases are due to a pinching of the nerves, by subluxated vertebrae, where they leave the spine. When this impingement occurs, due to a fall, wrench, contracted muscles or other causes, the organ or part which is supplied with nerve nourishment becomes weakened and disease, abnormal tissue growths or decay occurs. When the spine is placed in perfect alignment with Chiropractic adjustments the nerve nourishment is allowed to flow freely to the station at the other end of the nerve and in time the organ or part is restored naturally to its normal state and health again results.

These Instances Will Serve to Show You How I Remove the Cause of Disease

Illustration No. 1 shows the 7th vertebra of the neck out of place. A case in point is that of a man who had paralysis on "one" side, and the heart was weak, caused by the dislocated vertebra pressing on the nerves leading to the brain and heart and shutting off the nervous energy. By adjusting the vertebra, the normal condition was restored and the man was made well. I have a great many of these cases, and 98 per cent were made well.

CONSUMPTION AND BRONCHIAL TROUBLE

Illustration No. 2 shows the 9th vertebra of a young man. The case 9. Consumption in a young man. The case 9. Consumption in a young man. The second and third dorsal vertebrae were found in a lateral subluxated condition, throwing a pressure on the nerves leading to the lungs, causing decomposition of the lungs which threw the patient into consumption. By replacing the vertebrae and removing the pressure from these nerves it gives nature a chance to restore perfect health. I have had a large percent of these cases, and all were either made well or much benefited.

Illustration No. 3 shows the 6th vertebra of a lady with a bad cough and bronchitis caused by a subluxation of the 6th cervical vertebra pressing the nerves ramifying the bronchial tubes and causing severe coughing spells. This was readily overcome by adjusting the vertebra to normal position. Similar cases are of frequent occurrence and I have caused many people to get well who were affected by the same trouble.

CATARH AND DEAFNESS.

Illustration No. 4. A young man who had a bad fall and subluxated the second cervical of the neck shutting off the nerve forces to the brain and the result was he became violently insane; this was adjusted and the young man free from catarrh and deafness.

Illustration No. 5. A boy with a bad case of tonsillitis was brought to my office and on examination I found fourth cervical vertebra of the neck subluxated and three adjustments removed the cause of his trouble and he is a well boy today. It is a very easy matter to overcome these simple diseases, yet many children are allowed to get into very critical conditions. It simply proves the superiority of the Chiropractic science.

Illustration No. 6. A case of a lady with a bad cough and bronchitis caused by a subluxation of the 6th cervical vertebra pressing the nerves ramifying the bronchial tubes and causing severe coughing spells. This was readily overcome by adjusting the vertebra to normal position. Similar cases are of frequent occurrence and I have caused many people to get well who were affected by the same trouble.

At The Theatre

"THE SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS"

"The woods and the hills are a part of God's handiwork." From this play you may, in some measure, feel their influence. My plan is the story of a man who took the trail that leads to the "lower ground," and a woman, and how she found her way to the higher sunlit fields.

These are Harold Bell Wright's preliminary remarks regarding his dramatization of his celebrated novel, "The Shepherd of the Hills," which comes to the Myers Theatre, Sunday, Aug. 25, Mat. and evening. He has written a story of rough metropolitan audiences in many seasons, a fact proved by its run of a year in New York and nearly that length of time in Chicago.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Robert Edson may be seen in a new drama called "Mister Bill, a Man."

Bert Williams has been engaged for a leading part in "The Follies of 1912."

John Phillips Sousa's opera, "The Glassblowers," is to be produced in the fall.

Frances Starr will open her season

SCENE FROM ACT II, "THE SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS," AT MYERS THEATRE, SUNDAY, AUGUST 25.

times in the Ozarks—days before the coming of the railroads, the period of huskings, house raisings, rough and ready settlement of disputes with the fist, laborious farming, highway robbery and so on. It is a "red-blood" virile play, yet one that has a deep message. It is filled with unique characters and incidents. The fact that the novel from which the play was made, has held the record for five years as the leading "best seller," is ample proof that it is what the public wants.

In "The Case of Becky" in Providence late next month.

Frederick Bond has been engaged for the cast of "Buxi," in which H. B. Warner will star.

Five hundred Chinamen are to take part in the leather production of "The Daughter of Heaven."

Mme. Simonne is to have a play of the time of Louis XIV. by Louis N. Parker and D. Devers Blackpole.

Somerset Maugham, the English dramatist, is to write a play of Canada, which Charles Frohman will produce.

After a time with "Officer 666," Douglas Fairbanks is to star in "Havethorne, U. S. A.," a comedy by James Fagin.

"Molly Make-Believe" by Eleanor Hollowell Abbott, is to be dramatized, and Violet Dale will be featured in the play.

Cyril Scott has been engaged for the leading role in a new play by Jules Eckert Goodman, entitled "The Point of View."

Fred Niblo and Josephine Cohan are making a tour in Australia in "The Fortune Hunter" and "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford."

John Court is to produce a new play in New York in the fall, entitled "Ransomed," by Theodore, Bert Sayre and Cleveland Rodgers.

Josephine Victor, who played the part of the Pheasant Hen in "Chanticleer," will be leading woman with Arnold Daly the coming season.

The new Barrie comedy, in which Maude Adams will appear some time during the coming season, is entitled "The Legion of Leonora."

Lewis Waller has acquired the American rights to a new play by

Dinner Stories

A merchant wishing to sharpen his pencil, discovered that he had left his penknife at home. None of his clerks chanced to have one, so, as a last resource the merchant called the office boy, who was able to furnish the desired article.

"How is it, Tommy," said the employer, "that you alone out of my whole staff seem to have your penknife with you?"

"Dunno, sir," replied Thomas, "unless it's because my wages are so low that I can't afford more than one pair of trousers."

The matinee ladies were just crowding into the Times square subway station the other day when Gus Schiedecker's troubles came to a focus, according to the Cincinnati Times Star.

Mr. Schiedecker walked hurriedly through the feminine throng, weeping bitterly and blowing his nose. Then he took a high dive off the platform and snuggled himself into the arms of a woman who was just getting on the train. She looked at him and said: "What a fine fellow! I want to live until I have made him a blue eye."

"I don't," howled Mr. Schiedecker. "Do me such a favor, Misder. Get me the name of that man what has been kicking. I want to live until I have made him a blue eye."

over one of the rails. "Come out of that," said Daniel Cornwall, a heavy set and impolite resident of Port Washington. "Come out of that. You'll get hurt."

The despondent Mr. Schiedecker lifted his head from the rail to announce that he wanted to die. That he had thoroughly determined upon dying and that if the perfect stranger who had addressed him in the previous terms spoke to him again he

Mr. Schiedecker would bite his nose off. Mr. Cornwall leaped into the subway trench and got Mr. Schiedecker by the collar. "Up, Dutchman," said he, having formed a hasty guess at M. Schiedecker's nationality. "Rausch mit him. There are ladies here, and you are hurting their feelings."

Mr. Schiedecker delivered a hasty blow in the general direction of Mr. Cornwall. Mr. Cornwall grabbed him by the neck and breeches, tossed him on the platform, leaped lightly up as a train came thundering in, and then kicked the despondent Mr. Schiedecker until he started a bunion.

STORIES OF ZELIG AND SCHEPPS MAKE DAMAGING EVIDENCE AGAINST BECKER

"Big Jack" Zelig.

The stories told by "Big Jack" Zelig, notorious East Side gang leader of New York, and Sam Schepps, "murderer's paymaster," are said to have supplied the last links in the chain of evidence against Police Lieutenant Charles Becker and the six others indicted in connection with the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

Zelig's story, supported by Schepps' statements was that Lieut. Becker, after deciding that Rosenthal must die, framed up his arrest by having someone to drop a revolver in his pocket, which, under the Sullivan law, means seven years in the penitentiary. After Zelig was released on bail, some one acting for Becker, it is said, told Zelig if he provided gun men to do away with Rosenthal he'd have a chance of clearing himself. "I got the men and then left town," Zelig said.

WARDEN ARRESTS FARMER FOR SEINING FOR TROUT

Chippewa Falls, Aug. 24.—Today Deputy Game Warden Kirkoff arrested Bill Dettler, a farmer in the town of Seymour, ten miles south of here, for seining trout. The game warden lay two days in the brush along the Big Beaver creek watching for his victim. Bill had thirty-nine fine speckled beauties in his possession when apprehended by the game warden, who found him in the stream busy with his net. He paid a fine of $18.55.

Veterans' Sons Gather.
St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 24.—Delegates from many States arrived in St. Louis today to attend the thirty-first national encampment of the Sons of Veterans, composed of honorably discharged Union soldiers and sailors and their sons and grandsons. The sessions will begin at the Planters' Hotel Monday and continue through the greater part of the week. At the same time the Ladies' Auxiliary, of which Mrs. Flora A. S. Whitney of Worcester, Mass., is president, will hold its annual meeting. Abundant entertainment for the visitors has been prepared by the local organization.

Capture of Washington.
Washington, D. C., Aug. 24.—August 24th is a memorable date in the history of Washington, for it was just ninety-eight years ago today that the British army in command of Gen. Ross took possession of the national capital and applied the torch to the congressional library and a number of other public buildings.

MAY BE GOODWIN'S NEXT WIFE, RUMORED

Miss Marjorie Moreland.

Miss Marjorie Moreland, leading lady of Nat Goodwin's last company, may be that famous comedian's next wife, rumor says. Nat has been paying a lot of attention to this actress of late, and it was in an effort to deliver a note for her to an Indian on shore that he was injured by being thrown from a skiff in the breakers near Los Angeles recently. The skipper of the launch from which Goodwin rowed away in the skiff refused to allow Miss Moreland to leave the launch, saying Goodwin's attempt to land was foolhardy.

Goodwin has had poor luck in his rather numerous matrimonial ventures. His last two wives, Maxine Elliott and Edna Goodrich, lived with him but a short time and then sought relief in the divorce courts.

DIEKEMA IN CHARGE SPEAKERS' BUREAU

Gerritt J. Diekema.

Former Congressman Gerritt J. Diekema, of Michigan, has been placed in charge of the speakers' bureau at Republican headquarters in Chicago. Diekema is a hustler and without doubt will soon have a number of Republican orators of national note on the hustings throughout the middle west. During the pre-convention campaign, Diekema conducted the Taft fight for delegates in Michigan, with such success that it was determined to give him an important job in the presidential campaign.

FOR ASSEMBLYMAN

LUCIUS E. KENNEDY

The progressive movement like the Grand Old Republican Party, was born in Wisconsin and within the ranks of that party. I deem that party the best fitted to secure for, and return to the people, their government.

I believe that Republicanism means progress.

I believe that any person holding the office of Assemblyman should at all times work for and in the interests of his constituents.

I believe in an economic and business administration.

I believe that every man should pay his just share of the taxes.

I believe in the enforcement of the law, as does every good citizen.

I believe in the preservation of the rights of womanhood and the protection of childhood.

I come from the ranks of labor and believe in the protection of the rights of the workingman.

Agriculture is Wisconsin's chief source of wealth and I favor such legislation as will properly safeguard the interests of the farmer.

I am engaged in business and have a high respect for men who have achieved success.

I favor such legislation as will bring industries into the state and help them prosper.

I favor such amendments to the Income Tax Law, as will make it a law that will be fair to all. The amendment to the State Constitution authorizing the Income Tax Law was adopted by a majority vote, at two sessions of the Legislature and ratified by the people, by a vote of four to one and should the people desire to again voice their opinion of the law, I favor a resubmission of this law to a vote.

W. T. SHERMAN

Town of La Prairie Candidate For

COUNTY TREASURER

On the Republican Ticket

Primaries, September 3, 1912

Seven years a member of the County Board. Any support tendered my candidacy will be appreciated.

Pleasures of Childhood.
"Well, what has my little girl been doing today?" asked a Kansas City mother of her daughter of six years who had just returned from play.
"Why," was the reply, "we had a couple get married, and then they went away for a wedding trip and then they had a baby and then the baby died of spinal meningitis. Oh, we had the most fun!"

SKIN ERUPTION CAME ON CHEEK

Started in Pimples. Nearly All One Cheek Solid Sore. Very Itchy. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Face All Healed Up.

Kingsley, Mich.—"Last May my thirteen-month-old baby had a sore come on her cheek. It started in four or five small pimples and in two or three hours' time spread to the size of a silver dollar. It spread to her eye. The water would run from the pimples and wherever that touched it caused more sores until nearly all one cheek and up her nostrils were one solid sore. She was very fretful. She certainly was a terrible looking child, and nothing seemed to be of any use. Then I got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment. She tried to rub off everything we put on so that we would sit and hold her hands for two hours at a time, trying to give the medicine a chance to help her, but after I washed it with Cuticura Soap and then put on the Cuticura Ointment they seemed to soothe her and she did not try to rub them off. It was only a few days before her face was all healed up, and there has been no return of the trouble since. We thought that baby's face would surely be scarred, but it is not." (Signed) Mrs. A. J. Kingsley, Jan. 5, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card, "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston." Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.

Reminiscences of the Civil War By Late Capt. H. M. Wheeler

From the files of the Gazette, a letter by Captain H. M. Wheeler, Co. E, Fifth Wisconsin Regiment, which was published fifty years ago in the issue of July 22, is taken. Captain Wheeler wrote to the editors of the Gazette at that time from Harrison's Landing, James River, just after his regiment and company had made the retreat with McClellan's army from Richmond. The letter is of interest because of mention made of a number of Janesville men who were with the company at that time.

Company E was the company known as the Janesville Light Guards and was composed of six brave men as ever went into the war. Captain Wheeler was in command when the company went out with the regiment and was attached to the Army of the Potomac. He continued in the command until his death, when he was shot down in battle. The letter was as follows:

Camp at Harrison's Landing, James River, Va., July 11, 1862.—Today being rainy and all being quiet in front, I will drop you a few lines, knowing that you are a friend of the company, and that a knowledge of their situation will be of interest to you. You of course know the "whys and wherefores" of falling back to the James River, so I will say nothing of it. But that we are here, and that our regiment has passed through such a series of dangers and hardships safely, I can assure you that I am more than thankful.

But to the condition of my company. When I arrived at Washington on our way to the seat of war, I numbered an aggregate of 135 men—the largest company in Smith's division. We now have an aggregate of 98. I have now 44 enlisted for duty; and as most of the companies in our division are in about the same condition, you can see at a glance how it is that McClellan's army has had to fall back from Richmond—because our army is too small. Now my opinion is, from the last year's experience, that it takes about two men of our army to make one fighting man. It is said that it takes a great many kinds of men to make a world, and I will add that there are a great many kinds of men in the army.

When we arrived at this camp, General Smith issued an order to have the roll called and noted who were "here" and "there" reference; and that order that caused me to write to you, for it is my purpose to give you the names of the men of the Janesville Light Guard that generally answer "here" at the roll-call, when there is fighting in prospect. We have now on the ground 68 men of the 98. They are scattered and I know nothing of the absent ones, except that I left them at such and such a place. I will give you the names of the men of Co. E that were engaged in the battle of Williamsburg.

Sergeant H. C. Horn (killed), E. P. Mills, A. W. Hathaway, Corporals, G. W. Dutton, J. C. Rogers, Jas. McDaniel, Chas. C. Harrington, Geo. Thornegate (wounded), R. W. Walker, privates, H. S. Ames, Louis Anderson, C. M. Ayres, Jesse Anson, N. Baker, R. Beach, J. B. Carr, (missing until next morning), R. D. Connel, H. Curran, C. M. Densmore, J. Dunn, J. D. Dysart, Wm. M. Egan, J. S. Foster (missing until next day), S. C. Glover, W. W. Hastings, Geo. W. Hale, Jas. W. Higgins, (wounded), Ingelsoll, J. K. Johnson, (wounded), Wm. M. Clure, E. Miles, Thos. Miller, Alonzo Nellis, George Pederson, Joseph Pierson, C. A. Pierce, R. W. Pitts, B. K. Platts, M. Rhodes, J. B. Russell, P. A. Shaw, J. C. Simms, S. P. Smith, J. G. Smith, E. C. Small, E. C. Stephens, Wm. C. Stuck, C. M. Taylor, (missing until late in evening), Henry Wagner, R. B. Webster, (wounded), George Westemeier, and W. W. Wiggins. Total 62.

Names of those that were in "line" after the march from the Chickahominy: Lieut. A. W. Hathaway, Sergts. E. P. Mills, Geo. W. Dutton; Corporals Jas. McDaniel, C. C. Harrington, R. W. Walker, Jas. W. Higgins and Henry Curran; privates, H. S. Ames, C. M. Ayres, Jesse Anson, N. Baker, W. W. Bradshaw, R. Beach, C. M. Densmore, Jas. D. Dysart, S. C. Glover, W. W. Hastings, Geo. W. Hale, R. A. Hickox, C. A. Ingelsoll, Henry Jarvis, Thomas Miller, E. Miles, Alonzo Nellis, J. R. Newkirk, Geo. Pederson, C. A. Pierce, Martin Rhodes, H. C. Russell, J. B. Russell, J. C. Simms, E. C. Small, Wm. M. Clure, J. W. Wiggins, Theodore West, Joseph P. Lincoln, and Alvin Walworth. Total 38.

The above composed the "bone and sinew" of the Light Guard, although there are some noble exceptions on the sick list, and it so happens that in the lists their names do not appear. All the men who were on the Chickahominy have come through. Before we took our last position, I left Francis D. Parker and Benjamin K. Platts at the hospital near Gaines' farm (Liberty Hall hospital) with Charles F. Packard, also of my company, as nurse. I fear that Parker was sent to the White House. I have every reason to believe the other two have been taken prisoners. There are some twenty of those here on the sick list, although none are very sick. Wm. Birt and Wm. Stuck are at the regimental hospital. Stuck has a fever, but fatigue, with some cases of diarrhea, is what at present prevails.

The weather, up to yesterday, has been excessively hot. We have been obliged to do considerable fatigue duty in the way of defense—firing and felling timber—which was very hard, considering the jaded condition of the men. They bore it as cheerfully as could be expected, and are now having quite an easy time.

Our position is a strong one, and I don't think the rebels will molest us. Indeed, I have not thought they would since we took a position, even before we were fortified. Our regiment did not fighting on the retreat. At the battle of Gould's farm, June 27th, we were engaged with Toombs' Georgia brigade. It was Toombs against Hancock, although Toombs had the most men by far. It was a fair fight, in open field, just at dark, and ending when we could see nothing but the flash of fire. We stayed with them until they withdrew. Prisoners of the same brigade informed us that they lost, in killed, some 300, while our loss in killed was, I think, six and quite a number wounded. Our loss was mostly in the 6th Maine regiment. In our regiment, Captain Edwards, of Company E, was shot in the right lung; Captain Walker of Company A, shot through the arm with a buck-shot; David C. Ripley, struck in the knee with a spent ball; and Corporal Walker, shot in the neck. Ripley and Walker are of my company. We had the advantage of position.

I am of the opinion that we are nearer Richmond than before, though not in distance. We are daily receiving reinforcements, and the army is daily becoming in health. The latter is probably to be seen than the former. President Lincoln visited our lines on the 24th, attended by McClellan and staff. Lieut. Clum is here, on board the Galena. He is in fine quarters, and I know of no one more worthy or deserving. To him I do not know but I owe my life, for a dry suit of clothes, and a nice dinner after we arrived at the river. I am, today, quite unwell, but shall not allow myself to get much sicker. My health has been remarkably good since I have been in the service, not being off duty but five days during the whole time. We have to look to newspapers for news is why I do not write.

Wishing you, my friends, and the friends of my company long life and happiness, I am very truly yours,
Capt. Co. E, 5th Reg. W. V.

Madame, There's Splendid Economy in Using Petroleum Carbon

THIS NEW FUEL DOES BETTER WORK THAN ANY OTHER FUEL AND AT A SMALLER COST.

Your money positively will not buy as much actual value in domestic fuel as it will when you buy Petroleum Carbon. This fuel is practically all carbon, being the deposit of carbon formed in huge oil tanks. There is no money in the ash because there is practically no ash. Each pound of this coal will burn with a fierce, steady, hot flame that is just right for cooking purposes. Let us send you, by careful, pleasant, courteous driver your first order. Telephone now. The cost is $9 per ton.

High grade Eastern Coke, the best that comes into this market, $7.50 per ton.

Order your Scranton Coal before the first of the month. Coal will go up in price then and it is rumored that it will go much higher before the season is over.

The Terrible Solomons

by JACK LONDON

HERE are no gainsaying that the Solomons are a hard-bitten bunch of islands. On the other hand, there are worse places in the world. But to the new chum who has no constitutional understanding of men and life in the rough, the Solomons may indeed prove terrible. All the foregone is quite true, and yet there are white men who have lived in the Solomons a score of years and who feel homesick when they go away from them. A man needs only to be careful—and lucky—to live a long time in the Solomons; but he must also be of the right sort. He must have the hall-mark of the inevitable white man stamped upon his soul. He must be inevitable. He must have a certain careless indifference to odds; a certain colossal self-satisfaction, and a racial egotism that convinces him that one white man is better than a thousand niggers every day in the week, and that on Sunday he is well able to clean out two thousand niggers. For such are the things that have made the white man inevitable.

Bertie Arkwright was not inevitable. He was too sensitive, too finely strung, and he possessed too much imagination. The world was too much with him. He projected himself too quiveringly into his environment. Wherefore, the last place in the world for him to go was the Solomons. He did not go expecting to stay. A five weeks' stop-over between steamers, he decided, would satisfy the call of the primitive he felt thrumming the strings of his being. At least, so he told the lady tourists on the Makemo, though in different terms; and they worshiped him as a hero, for they were lady tourists and they would know only the safety of the steamer's deck as she threaded her way through the Solomons.

There was another man on board, of whom the ladies took no notice. He was a little shriveled wisp of a man, with a withered skin the color of mahogany. His name on the passenger list does not matter, but his other name, Captain Malu, was a name for niggers to conjure with, and to scare naughty pickaninnies to righteousness, from New Hanover to the New Hebrides.

Bertie talked with Captain Malu in the smoking room, confiding to him his intention of seeing life red and bleeding in the Solomons. Captain Malu agreed that the intention was ambitious and honorable. It was not until several days later that he became interested in Bertie, when that young adventurer insisted on showing him an automatic forty-four-calibre pistol. Bertie explained the mechanism and demonstrated by slipping a loaded magazine up the barrel butt.

"It is so simple," he said. He shot the outer barrel back along the inner one. "That loads it and cocks it, you see. And then all I have to do is pull the trigger, eight times, as fast as I can quiver my finger. See that safety clutch? That's what I like about it. It is so safe. It is positively fool-proof." He slipped out the magazine. "You see how safe it is."

As he held it in his hand the muzzle came in line with Captain Malu's stomach. Captain Malu's blue eyes looked at it unswervingly.

"Would you mind pointing it in some other direction," he asked.

"It's perfectly safe," Bertie assured him. "I withdrew the magazine. It's not loaded, now, you know."

"A gun is always loaded."

"But this one isn't."

"Turn it away, just the same."

Captain Malu's voice was flat, metallic, and low, but his eyes never left the muzzle until the line of it was drawn past him and away from him.

"I'll bet a fiver it isn't loaded," Bertie proposed, warmly.

The other shook his head.

"Then I'll show you."

Bertie started to put the muzzle to his own temple with the evident intention of pulling the trigger.

"Just a second," Captain Malu said, quietly, reaching out his hand. "Let me look at it."

He pointed it seaward and pulled the trigger. A heavy explosion followed, instantaneous with the sharp click of the mechanism that flipped a hot and smoking cartridge sideways along the deck. Bertie's jaw dropped in amazement.

"I slipped the barrel back once, didn't I?" he explained. "It was silly of me, I must say."

He giggled, fuddled, and sat down in a steamer chair. The blood had ebbed from his face, exposing dark circles under his eyes. His hands were trembling and unable to guide the shaking cigarette to his lips. The world was too much with him, and he saw himself with dripping brains plying upon the deck.

"Really," he said, "really."

"It's a pretty weapon," said Captain Malu, returning the automatic to him.

The Commissioner was on board the Makemo, returning from Sydney, and by his permission a stop was made at Ugi to land a missionary. And at Ugi lay the ketch Aria, Captain Hansen, skipper. Now the Aria was one of many vessels owned by Captain Malu, and it was at his suggestion and by his invitation that Bertie went aboard the Aria as guest for a four days' recruiting cruise on the coast of Malaita. Thereafter the Aria would drop him at Reminge plantation (also owned by Captain Malu), where Bertie could remain for a week, and then be sent over to Tulagi, the seat of government, where he would become the Commissioner's guest.

Captain Malu was responsible for two other suggestions, which given, he disappears from this narrative. One was to Captain Hansen, the other to Mr. Harriwell, manager of Reminge Plantation. Both suggestions were similar in tenor, namely, to give Mr. Bertram Arkwright an insight into the rawness and redness of life in the Solomons. Also, it is whispered that Captain Malu mentioned that a case of Scotch would be coincidental with any particularly gorgeous insight Mr. Arkwright might receive.

"Yes, Swartz always was too pig-headed. You see, he took four of his boat's crew to Tulagi to be flogged—officially, you know—then started back with them in the whale boat. It was pretty squally, and the boat capsized just outside. Swartz was the only one drowned. Of course it was an accident."

"Was it? Really?" Bertie asked, only half interested, staring hard at the black man at the wheel.

Ugi had dropped astern, and the Aria was sliding along through a summer sea toward the wooded ranges of Malaita. The helmsman who so attracted Bertie's eyes sported a ten-penny nail, stuck skewer-wise through his nose. About his neck was a string of pants buttons. Thrust through holes in his ears were a can opener, the broken handle of a toothbrush, a clay pipe, the brass wheel of an alarm clock and several Winchester rifle cartridges. On his chest, suspended from around his neck, hung the half of a china plate. Some forty similarly appareled blacks lay about the deck, fifteen of whom were boat's crew, the remainder being fresh labor recruits.

"Of course it was an accident," spoke up the Aria's mate, Jacobs, a slender, dark-eyed man who looked more a professor than a sailor. "Johnny Bedip nearly had the same kind of accident. He was bringing several from a flogging when they capsized him. But he knew how to swim as well as they, and two of them were drowned. He used a boat stretcher and a revolver. Of course it was an accident."

"Quite common, then, accidents," remarked the skipper. "You see that man at the wheel, Mr. Arkwright? He's a man-eater. Six months ago he and the rest of the boat's crew drowned the then captain of the Aria. They did it on deck, sir, right aft there by the millen-traveler."

"The deck was in a shocking state," said the mate.

"Do I understand?" Bertie began.

"Yes, just that," said Captain Hansen. "It was accidental drowning."

"But on deck?"

"Just so. I don't mind telling you, in confidence, of course, that they used an ax."

"This present crew of yours?"

Captain Hansen nodded.

"The other skipper always was too careless," explained the mate. "He but just turned his back when they let him have it."

"We haven't any show down here," was the skipper's complaint. "The government protects a nigger against a white every time. You can't shoot first. You've got to give the nigger first shot, or else the government calls it murder and you go to Fiji. That's why there's so many drowning accidents."

Dinner was called and Bertie and the skipper went below, leaving the mate to watch on deck.

"Keep an eye out for that black devil, Aulki," was the skipper's parting caution. "I haven't liked his looks for several days."

"Right O," said the mate.

Dinner was part way along, and the skipper was in the middle of his story of the cutting-out of the Scottish Chiefs.

"Yes," he was saying, "she was the finest vessel on the coast. But when she missed stays, and before ever she hit the reef, the canoes started for her. There were five white men, a crew of twenty Santa Cruz boys and Samoans, and only the supercargo escaped. Besides, there were sixty recruits. They were all kai-kai. Kai-kai, uh, I beg your pardon, I mean they were eaten. Then there was the James Edwards, a dandy-rigger."

But at that moment there was a sharp oath from the mate on deck and a chorus of savage cries. A revolver went off three times, and then was heard a loud splash. Captain Hansen had sprung up the companionway on the instant, and Bertie's eyes had been fascinated by a glimpse of him drawing his revolver as he sprang. Bertie went up the mate's companionway, hesitating before he put his head above the companionway slide. But nothing happened. The mate was shaking with excitement, his revolver in his hand. Once he started and half jumped around, as if danger threatened his back.

"One of the natives fell overboard," he was saying, in a queer, tense voice. "He couldn't swim."

"Who was it?" the skipper demanded.

"Aulki," was the answer.

"But I say, you know, I heard shots," Bertie said, in trembling eagerness for the second adventure, and adventure that was happily over with. The mate whirled upon him, snarling.

"It's a lie. There ain't been a shot fired. The nigger fell overboard."

Captain Hansen regarded Bertie with unblinking, lack-luster eyes.

"I—I thought—" Bertie was beginning.

"Shots?" said Captain Hansen, dreamily. "Shots? Did you hear any shots, Mr. Jacobs?"

"Not a shot," replied Mr. Jacobs.

The skipper looked at his guest, triumphantly, and said:

"Evidently an accident. Let us go down, Mr. Arkwright, and finish dinner."

Bertie stood that night in the captain's cabin, a tiny stateroom off the main cabin. The fore-and-aft bulkhead was decorated with a stand of rifles. Over the bunk were three more rifles. Under the bunk was a big drawer, which, when he pulled it out, he found filled with ammunition, dynamite, and several boxes of detonators. He elected to take the settee on the opposite side. Lying conspicuously on the small table was the Aria's log. Bertie did not know that it had been especially prepared for the occasion by Captain Malu, and he read therein how, on September 21, two boat's crew had fallen overboard and been drowned. Bertie read between that line and knew better. He read how the Aria's wholeboat had been bushwhacked at Su'u and had lost three men; of how the skipper discovered the cook stewing human flesh on the galley fire—flesh purchased by the boat's crew, ashore in Fui. He read of how an accidental discharge of dynamite, while signalling, had killed another boat's crew; of night attacks, ports fled from between the dawns, attacks by bushmen in mangrove swamps and by fleets of salt-water men in the larger passages. One item that occurred with monotonous frequency was death by dysentery. He noticed with alarm that two white men had so died—guests, like himself, on the Aria.

"I say, you know," Bertie said next day to Captain Hansen. "I've been glancing through your log."

The skipper displayed quick vexation that the log had been left lying about.

"And all that dysentery, you know, that's all rot, just like the accidental drownings," Bertie continued.

"What does dysentery really stand for?"

The skipper openly admired his guest's acumen, stiffened himself to make indignant denial, then gracefully surrendered.

"You see, it's like this, Mr. Arkwright. These islands have got a bad enough name as it is. It's getting harder every day to sign on white men. Suppose a man is killed. The company has to pay 'through the nose' for another man to take the place. But if the man merely dies of sickness, it's all right. The new chums don't mind disease. What they draw the line at is being murdered."

"Besides," said Mr. Jacobs, "there's altogether too many accidental drownings, anyway. It don't look right. It's the fault of the government. A white man hasn't a chance to defend himself from the niggers."

"Yes, look at the Princess and that Yankee mate."

The skipper took up the tale. "She carried five white men besides a government agent. The captain, the agent and the supercargo were ashore in the two boats. They were killed to the last man. The mate and boson, with about fifteen of the crew—Samoans and Tongans—were on board. A crowd of niggers came off from shore. First thing the mate knew, the boson and the crew were killed in the first rush. The mate grabbed three cartridge belts and two Winchesters and skinned up to the crossstrees. He was the sole survivor, and you can't blame him for being mad. He pumped one rifle till it got so hot, he couldn't hold it, then he pumped the other. The deck was black with niggers. He cleaned them out. He dropped them as they went over the rail, and he dropped them as fast as they picked up their paddles. Then they jumped into the water and started to swim for it, and, being mad, he got half a dozen more. And what did he get for it?"

"Seven years in Fiji," snapped the mate.

"The government said he wasn't justified in shooting

He started forward and the natives took headers over the barbed wire at every jump.

after they'd taken to the water," the skipper explained.

"And that's why they die of disease nowadays," the mate added.

"Just fancy," said Bertie, as he felt a longing for the cruise to be over.

Later on in the day he interviewed the black who had been pointed out to him as a cannibal. This fellow's name was Sumasi. He had spent three years on a Queensland plantation. He had been to Samon and Fiji and Sydney, and as a boat's crew had been on recruiting schooners through New Britain, New Ireland, New Guinea, and the Admiralties. Also, he was a wag, and he had taken a line on his skipper's conduct. Yes, he had eaten many men. How many? He could not remember the tally. Yes, white men, too; they were very good, unless they were sick. He had once eaten a sick one. "My word," he cried, at the recollection. "He sick plenty along him. My belly walk about too much."

Bertie shuddered, and asked about heads. Yes, Sumasi had several hidden ashore, in good condition, sun-dried and smoke-cured. One was of the captain of a schooner. It had long whiskers. He would sell it for two gilds. Black men's heads he would sell for one gild. He had some pickaninny heads, in poor condition; that he would let go for ten bobs.

Five minutes afterwards, Bertie found himself sitting on the companionway slide alongside a black with a horrible skin disease. He shivered off, and on inquiry, was told that it was leprosy. He hurried below and washed himself with antiseptic soap. He took many antiseptic washes in the course of the day, for every native on board was afflicted with malignant ulcers of one sort or another.

As the Aria drew in to an anchorage in the midst of mangrove swamps, a double row of barbed wire was stretched around above her rail. That looked like business, and when Bertie saw the shore canoes alongside, armed with spears, bows and arrows, and Sniders, he wished more earnestly than ever that the cruise was over.

That evening the natives were slow in leaving the ship. A number of them checked the mate when he ordered them ashore.

"Never mind, I'll fix them," said Captain Hansen, diving below. When he came back he showed Bertie a stick of dynamite attached to a fishhook. Now it happens that a paper-wrapped bottle of chloroform with a piece of harmless fuse projecting can fool anybody. It fooled Bertie, and it fooled the natives. When Captain Hansen lighted the fuse and hooked the fishhook into the tail end of a native's loin cloth, that native was smitten with so ardent a desire for the shore that he forgot to shed the loin cloth. He started forward, the fuse sizzling and spluttering at his rear, the natives in his path taking headers over the barbed wire at every jump.

the barbed wire at every jump. Bertie was horror-stricken. So was Captain Hansen. He had forgotten his twenty-five recruits, on each of which he had paid thirty shillings. They went over the side along with the shore-dwelling folk, followed by him who trailed the sizzling chloroform bottle.

Bertie did not see the bottle go off; but the mate opportunely discharging a stick of real dynamite aft where it would harm nobody, Bertie would have sworn in any admiralty court to a nigger blown to flinders. The flight of the twenty-five recruits had actually cost the Aria forty pounds, and since they had taken to the bush, there was no hope of recovering them. The skipper and his mate proceeded to drown their sorrows in cold tea. The cold tea was in whisky bottles, so Bertie did not know it was cold tea; they were mopping up. All he knew was that the two men got very drunk and argued eloquently and at length as to whether the exploded nigger should be reported as a case of disease or as an accidental drowning. When they snored off to sleep he was the only white man left, and he kept a perilous watch till dawn, in fear of an attack from shore and an uprising of the crew.

Three more days the Aria spent on the coast, and three more nights the skipper and the mate drank over-fondly of cold tea, leaving Bertie to keep the watch. They knew he could be depended upon, while he was equally certain that if he lived he would report their drunken conduct to Captain Malu. Then the Aria dropped anchor at Reminge Plantation, on Guadalcanal, and Bertie landed on the beach with a sigh of relief and shook hands with the manager, Mr. Harriwell, who was ready for him.

"Now, you mustn't be alarmed if some of our fellows seem downcast," Mr. Harriwell said, showing drawn him aside in confidence. "There's been talk of an outbreak, and two or three suspicious signs I'm objected to keeping those guns on the premises."

"They're still there," Mr. Harriwell said, with a show of heat. Mr. Brown smiled incredulously. "Come along and see," said the manager.

Bertie joined the procession into the office, where Mr. Harriwell pointed triumphantly at a big packing case in a dusty corner.

"Well, then, where did the beggar get that Snider?"

harped Mr. Brown. But just then Mr. Harriwell lifted the packing case. The manager started, then tore off the lid. The case was empty. They gazed at one another in horrified silence. Harriwell dropped wearily.

Then Mr. Harriwell cursed. "What I contended all along—the house boys are not to be trusted."

"It does look serious," Harriwell admitted, "but we'll come through it all right. What the sanguinary niggers need is a shaking up. Will you gentlemen please bring your rifles to dinner, and will you, Mr. Brown, kindly prepare forty or fifty sticks of dynamite. Make the fuses four or fifty sticks of dynamite. Then a lesson. And now, gentlemen, dinner is served."

One thing that Bertie detected was rice and curry, so it happened that he alone partook of an inviting omelet. He had quite finished his plate, when Harriwell helped himself to the omelet. One mouthful he tasted, then spat out vociferously.

"That's the second time," Mr. Harriwell announced ominously.

Harriwell was still hawking and spitting. "Second time, what?" Bertie quavered.

"Poison," was the answer. "That cook will be hanged yet."

"That's the way the bookkeeper went out at Cape Marsh," Brown spoke up. "Died horribly. They said on the Jessie that they heard him screaming three miles away."

"I'll take the cook in iron," spluttered Harriwell. "Fortunate we discovered it in time."

Bertie sat paralyzed. There was no color in his face. He attempted to speak, but only an inarticulate gurgle resulted. All eyed him anxiously.

"Don't say it, don't say it," Mr. Harriwell cried in a tense voice.

"Yes, I ate it, plenty of it, a whole plateful!" Bertie cried, explosively, like a diver suddenly regaining breath. The awful silence continued half a minute longer, and he read his fate in their eyes.

"Maybe it wasn't poison after all," said Harriwell, dismally.

"Call in the cook," said Brown.

In came the cook, a grinning black boy, nose-plugged with ear-plugs.

"Here you, W-I-W-I, what name that?" Harriwell bellowed, pointing accusingly at the omelet. W-I-W-I was very naturally frightened and embarrassed.

"Him good fella kai-kai," he murmured, apologetically.

"Make him eat it," suggested Mr. Harriwell. "That's a proper test."

Harriwell filled a spoon with the stuff and jumped for the cook, who fled in panic.

"That settles it," was Brown's solemn pronouncement. "He won't eat it."

"Mr. Brown, will you please go and put the guns on him," Harriwell turned cheerfully to Bertie. "It's all right, old man, the Commissioner will deal with him, and if you die depend upon it, he will be hanged."

"Don't think the government'll do it," objected Mr. Harriwell.

"But, gentlemen, gentlemen," Bertie cried, "imagine meantime think of me!"

Harriwell shrugged his shoulders, pityingly. "Sorry, old man, but it's a native poison, and there are no known antidotes for native poisons. Try and compose yourself, and if—"

Two sharp reports of a rifle from without interrupted the discourse, and Brown, entering, reloaded his rifle and sat down to table.

"The cook's dead," he said. "Fever. A rather sudden attack."

"I was just telling Mr. Arkwright that there are no antidotes for native poisons."

"Except gin," said Brown.

Harriwell called himself an absent-minded idiot and rushed for the gin bottle.

"Neat, man, neat," he warned Bertie, who gulped down a tumbler two-thirds full of the raw spirit and coughed and choked from the angry bite of it, till his tears ran down his cheeks.

Harriwell took his pulse and temperature, made a show of looking out for him, and declared that the omelet had been poisoned. Brown and Mr. Harriwell also doubted; but Bertie discerned an insincere ring in their voices. His appetite had left him, and he took his own pulse stealthily under the table. There was no question but what it was increasing, but he failed to ascribe it to the gin he had taken.

Mr. Harriwell, rifle in hand, went out on the veranda to reconnoiter. "They're massing up at the cook house," was his report. "And they've no end of Sniders—my idea is to sneak around on the other side and take them in flank. Strike the first blow, you know. Will you come along, Brown?"

Harriwell ate on steadily, while Bertie discovered that his pulse had leaped up five beats. Nevertheless, he could not help jumping when the rifles began to go off. Above the scattering of Sniders could be heard the pumping of Brown's and Mr. Harriwell's Winchesters—all against a background of demoniacal screaming and yelling.

"They've got them on the run," Harriwell remarked, as voices and gunshots faded away in the distance.

Scarcely were Brown and Mr. Harriwell back at the table when the latter reconnoitered.

"They've got dynamite," he said.

"Then let's charge them with dynamite," Harriwell proposed.

Thrusting half a dozen sticks each into their pockets and equipping themselves with lighted cigars, they started for the door. And just then it happened. They blamed Mr. Harriwell for it afterwards, and he admitted that the charge had been a trifle excessive. But at any rate it went off under the house, which lifted up cornerwise and settled back on its foundations. Half the china on the table was shattered, while the eight-day clock stopped. Yelling for vengeance, the three men rushed out into the night and the bombardment began.

When they returned, there was no light. He had dragged himself away to the office, hauled himself in, and sunk upon the floor in a gin-soaked nightmare wherein he died a thousand deaths while the valiant fight went on around him. In the morning, sick and headachey from the gin, he crawled out to find the sun still in the sky and God presumably in heaven, for his hosts were alive and uninjured.

Harriwell pressed him to stay longer, but Bertie insisted on sailing immediately on the Aria for Tulagi, where, until the following steamer day, he could close by the Commissioner's house. There were lady tourists on the outgoing steamer, and Bertie was again a hero, while Captain Malu, as usual, passed unnoted. But Captain Malu sent back from Sydney two cases of the best Scotch whiskey on the market, for he was not able to make up his mind as to whether it was Captain Hansen or Mr. Harriwell who had given Bertie Arkwright, the more gorgeous insight into life in the Solomons.

"Mr. Brown is my assistant," explained Mr. Harriwell. "And now let's have that drink." "But where'd you get that Snider?" Mr. Brown insisted. "I always objected to keeping those guns on the premises."

"They're still there," Mr. Harriwell said, with a show of heat. Mr. Brown smiled incredulously. "Come along and see," said the manager.

BY WALT MASON

I paused before the cobbler's door, and cried: "Oh, man of shoes, we are down-trodden more and more, till good men have the blues—The special interests have got the nation" by the throat, so leave your wax and all that rot, and come with me and vote! Now every cherished bulwark busts, and Freedom's birds and owls! We're robbed and riddled by the trusts, so come with me and howl! The sacred boon of liberty has perished in the storm, so leave your work and come with me, and rant and yell "Reform!" Oh, cobbler, leave your sordid bench and help me paint things red, and bring along a monkey-wrench, to cave in someone's head!" The cobbler stilled and pegged along, and answered, "By the powers! I work, and I see nothing wrong with this fair land of ours! You say the country's on the skids; I say that it is fine; you ought to see my wife and that new-home of mine; I am as happy as a clam when clams are at their best, and as I work I sing a psalm, and chortle when I rest. My trade increases day by day because I do things well, I'm out of debt, and I'm as gay as any marriage bell. And while I've health I'll here be bound to work and pay my bills; let idle soreheads rant around about the nation's ills!" Such men as this, who do not care for aught but sordid things, have brought this nation to despair, and wrecked its hopes, by jings!

IF TOMORROW IS YOUR BIRTHDAY.

Of your next year will be a fortunate one and many pleasant things will happen. Some restraint should be placed on your conduct, however, also a wholesome regard for consequences maintained.

Those unborn today should be carefully taught the laws of health and a natural lack of judgment in choice of friends should be corrected. In business they will be successful and prosperous.

Old Wall Brought to Light.

During the recent demolition of some old cottages at Norwich, Norfolk, England, a long section of the old city wall, comprising a score of Norman arches, was revealed. The wall was built in the fourteenth century.

A TRAVELER.

He stood upon the steamer,
As it rocked upon the sea;
He cried: "I am a sailor,
They've got not a thing on me!"

A billow came a-rolling,
And the boat it gave a tip,
His foot it struck the railing,
And he made an "ocean dip."

Sounded Like Gaelic.

A story is told of a certain mayor of Cork who headed a deputation to the emperor of the French and commenced an oration to his majesty in which he conceived to be the French tongue. "Pardon me," said the emperor, after he had listened to the speech with much patience, "English I know fairly well, but I regret to say, I have never had an opportunity of studying the Irish language!"—Argonaut.

Good to Perfume Room.

D. W. WATT Tells of his Experience with Wagon and Railroad Shows

As a prelude to Mr. Watt's tales of by gone days under the White Tops, the following item may be interesting to those who are following with interest the circus stories as they appear each week.

"People of the village of Wauconda, about forty miles northwest of Chicago, besides collecting a fund for the erection of a monument to the memory of a country doctor of the vicinity, the late James Dawson, have already constructed a modest granite shaft in honor of a circus actor, who died, almost in their sight, while amusing them.

He was Charles Ward, a trapeze artist with a traveling one-ring circus of the old-fashioned type, moving from place to place in wagons.

In the quiet, shaded little Wauconda cemetery is Ward's grave, and above it stands a headstone with the inscription, "To Charles Ward, July 16, 1912—From the Citizens of Wauconda."

Ward went to Wauconda July 16 last with a traveling dog and pony show. He was one of the star actors. Running away from home on boyhood, lured to the sawdust ring by its enchantments, he was 40 years old. Nothing is known of his past or whether he had kith or kin living.

Two weeks before the circus came to Wauconda Ward was warned by a physician that he had a severe case of heart disease and must not act again.

"What else can I do?" he asked, with actor's fatalism. "That's all I know how to do now—act on the flying trapeze. I guess I'll have to stick it out."

One the night of the show at Wauconda Ward had just finished his act. He was sliding down a rope from his aerial perch when he was seen to stiffen and fall to the ground. He died within a few moments.

A Chicagoan named Sharde, a summer resort visitor at Wauconda, dismissed the audience.

Wauconda had never seen or heard of Ward before. He had no claim on the village or its citizens. Nevertheless, headed by Sharde, a subscription list was at once started and soon a sum sufficient for the modest headstone was raised, over fifty persons giving small sums.

Fellow actors bought a lot in the cemetery and paid for the burial. Rev. John Hallcock of the local church preached the sermon. Two weeks later Wauconda had erected the monument to the memory of the man who had amused them, dying while at his appointed task.

Many years ago in New York City a laborer, by the name of Connelley, was killed by the falling of a big timber from a building being erected. Connelley left a wife and two little girls and two five years old, named Nellie and Sadie. Sadie was the oldest, but Nellie the two year old was a cripple. Mrs. Connelley was left penniless with the two little girls to care for.

In looking around for something to do a kind hearted merchant on one of the busy corners of the great Bowery in New York said to Mrs. Connelley, "You can have room here on the corner in front of my store to open an apple stand." This Mrs. Connelley did and for more than 40 years after was known as "Mother Connelley," the Apple Woman of the Bowery.

Sadie helped her mother the best she could around the apple stand, having little education, but she learned to sing and dance and later worked in all the different concert halls in New York City in the winter.

In the spring of '74 Sadie came to Philadelphia and asked Mr. Forepaugh for a position in the concert and said she was willing to ride in parade and the grand entry as well. Sadie was hired and that was her home up to the time Mr. Forepaugh died.

In '78 at Fremont, Neb. the show closed the season proper and reorganized with as few performers as possible to go to Oakland, California, where they would winter and start out in '79. As they only showed three times, as few performers as possible were taken through. Sadie Connelley, with hundreds of others was paid off in Fremont and was supposed to leave that night for New York City.

She said nothing but went down town and bought herself a basket, filled it with lunch enough to last her a few days and started down the tracks looking for the flat car that had the band wagon on it. There was a canvas cover tied over the wagon and Sadie climbed up on the flat car, loosened the corner of the cover and crawled onto the band wagon.

The first run-out of Fremont was about 375 miles without a stop except to change cars. Monday morning about 9 o'clock the trains all stopped, unloaded everything, fed and watered the stock, put up the cook tent and fed the people. When everybody had got seated at breakfast Sadie Connelley walked in and said, "Good morning, Mr. Forepaugh. I thought some Saturday evening of going to New York but I changed my mind, knowing that you would need me badly on this trip."

Mr. Forepaugh only smiled and said, "Well, Sadie you are too far from New York now I suppose I'll have to take you through to the coast." Sadie put in the winter at San Francisco and Oakland and came east in the spring with the show. After Mr. Forepaugh died Sadie was engaged by the Barnum people for she was a valuable woman with the show. But every salary day Sadie would say to me, "This don't seem like home. I wish I could do something else."

About the middle of August I got a letter from a friend, W. D. Coxsy of Chicago, asking me for a woman to support Gus Hague who was the greatest Swedish impersonator in the business. I showed the letter to Sadie and said to her, "Here is your chance. I will telegraph Coxsy I have the right woman and the salary is $65 per week."

Mr. Coxsy telegraphed back "Send Miss Connelley to Chicago at once."

She left that night for Chicago and after rehearsing for about two weeks they got started on the road. They played in the larger cities through to the coast and latter in the winter opened for two weeks in Chicago. I went to Chicago to see the show and they were playing to standing room and Gus Hague and Sadie Connelley had three curtain calls that night. This was called the Ole Olson Company, Gus Hague being the greatest impersonator in the world and Sadie Connelley was certainly the best supporter.

In all these years Sadie every week sent a substantial sum to New York to care for her old mother and crippled sister.

The evening of the opening of the carnival company that was here a few weeks ago, I walked down to the show lot and before I had been there more than a minute a gentleman stepped up to me and called me by name.

He said "Dave don't you know me?" I said, "No I don't." "Well," he said, "my name is Ed Backetoe."

"You got me a job in '84 with the Forepaugh show when I was only 14 years old." The first thing I did was to take care of Rose Stickney's trained dogs. The next spring I went to work on ring stock and was there four years. That is where I got my insight from Adam Forepaugh, Jr., whom I assisted while he was training horses."

Mr. Backetoe trained the wonderful mare Mameza that he had with the show and he told me that he had been 15 years getting this show together, a little at a time. He said to me that next spring he would start out a circus and manager of 22 cars playing the smaller towns.

"And by the way Dave," he said, "Did you hear of the fate of your old friend Jim Jordan?" Jim sold outside tickets for the Forepaugh show for 22 years. They were tickets that sold for 60 cents, 10 cents in advance of the regular price to people who chose to buy them rather than get in the crowd and rush at the ticket office.

"Well," he said, "He with two other friends were touring Europe and made up their minds to come home on the great new boat the Titanic. And Dave," he said, "That was the last of poor Jim Jordan and his two friends for they went down with the boat."

On Wednesday last I went to Rockford to see the great Ringling show and I could not help but think of the difference between the show that day and in the fall of '85 when I drove across the country from Clinton, Wis. to Edgerton where the show closed the season. Then it was a small wagon show with one ring, but always clean and well managed. At Edgerton they closed the season and drove across the country to the winter quarters in Baraboo. But today the canvass is 485 feet long and 185 feet wide, with a seating capacity of many thousands, and at Rockford every seat was taken.

When you come to think that you can see animals from every country in the world, the finest trained animals of all kinds, the finest riders, acrobats and aerial performers that it is possible to procure and in addition see the beautiful production of Joan of Arc with beautiful music and costumes that would do credit to any grand opera company—to think that it is possible to see all this for fifty cents, is it not enough?

I there found Al and Charlie Ringling, Al being the oldest and Charlie the youngest of the brothers, in charge of the show. I asked them if there was any reason why they passed up Janesville this season and they said none whatever, that it did not happen to be on the route. I also talked to them about their removal from the nailed up every window and we have every building that we own in Baraboo and they will not be taken down until the laws of the state are different from what they are today."

All their show property has been removed to Bridgeport, Connecticut, where they will winter both shows. Charlie Ringling has moved his family to New Rochelle, Illinois where he will reside in the future. Let us hope that conditions may change so that the greatest show in the world may come back to the old homestead and be one of us.

N. Y. REPUBLICANS MAY NAME BUTLER

Nicholas Murray Butler.

There is a strong movement on foot among New York Republicans for the nomination of President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University, for governor of the Empire state by the Republican party. Butler is a staunch Republican and many believe he would make a stronger run than James W. Wadsworth, the young politician who has recently thrown his hat into the ring as a G. O. P. candidate.

TELLS OF DICKENS' CHILDREN

The New Dictionary A Treasury of Literary Knowledge—A Help at Every Turn.

Recently the centenary of Charles Dickens, the great English novelist, was celebrated in various ways. Stamps were sold for the benefit of his children's children, and the children born of his wonderful imagination and knowledge of human nature are being discussed more than ever before.

In this instance The Gazette's Dictionary will be found a timely aid. If you hear or read of a Pecksniff or a Pickwick, and do not understand the reference, look the name up in the Treasury of Facts at the back of the New Websterian 1912 Dictionary. Illustrated, and you will be enlightened by the clear and concise statement found there.

The Gazette is passing out hundreds of volumes of this valuable work in exchange for six consecutive coupons and a small expense bonus. You can choose your binding from all silk cloth to the fine limp leather book that looks like a Bible.

If you have this latest Dictionary at your elbow, where it belongs, you can readily understand the references in your daily reading which have puzzled you heretofore. You will find that either in the dictionary proper or in the Treasury of Facts your want will be supplied. The Gazette offers you a dictionary in one common sense sized volume, which will serve your everyday needs. Characters from Shakespeare and all the best-known people of fiction are crowded into this Blue Book of the Book World.

This Dictionary is NOT published by the original publishers of Webster's Dictionary or by their successors.

Do you ever knot your brow over a legal phrase or the meaning of one or two Latin words used in connection? Stop it. Frowns will wrinkle the fairest forehead.

Don't procrastinate. Get that dictionary and stop puzzling. Six clippings and a small bonus get it.
